Plan to block nuclear spread forming

WASHINGTON (AP) — Britain and Russia are promoting a joint initiative — with probable backing from the United States — to slow the spread of tools and materials that could make nuclear weapons.

The development, reported by European and U.S. officials, comes as the Carter administration sets out to rally world backing for building an ordered international energy program based on shared aims.

In advance of two major parleys on nuclear energy development — first in London, this week, then in Salzburg, Austria — the informants outlined the British+Soviet plan:

It proposes a ban on the sale of all plants, equipment, technology and fuels listed as sensitive to would-be user nations unless those nations expose all their nuclear energy installations to constant surveillance and inspection.

A draft of the British+Soviet proposal already has been circulated among the 15 members of the so-called "Nuclear Suppliers' Club." These are mainly European and North American countries, plus Japan, able to export nuclear technology.

Among items subject to the ban, listed in the Vienna-based International Atomic Energy Agency document, are such things as:

—Defined categories of nuclear reactors.

—Reactor control rods which can be used in plutonium-producing reactors.

—Heavy water and deuterium which can be used in reactors for the production of plutonium.

—And a host of other techniques and equipments, materials and chemicals on a socalled "trigger list" that would enable a determined government to go nuclear.

The Carter administration seems ready to support the British+Soviet plan whether or not it applies to nations which are parties to the world treaty to stop the spread of nuclear weapons. In some situations the U.S. government would need to renegotiate various of its 30-odd nuclear cooperation accords with foreign countries.

Canada has been so much in favor of the plan that it is contemplating onesided application of its rules whether the whole plan is accepted internationally or not.

France has raised objections. It has argued that any country which, like France itself, has developed part of its nuclear technology by its own unaided efforts should not be required to expose that sector to foreign surveillance. The West Germans have said they'll do anything to which the French agree.

The British+Soviet plan has a particular significance for the Carter administration. This is because the United States is pondering whether, in the future, to supply anything in the nuclear field to countries which have declined to sign or ratify the world nonproliferation treaty designed to check the further spread of nuclear weapons. Experts in the administration are split. Some raise the case of Taiwan, and Korea, both with nuclear programs, both nonadherents to the treaty.

The U.S. team to the London meeting of the 15-nation "suppliers group" will be led by the assistant undersecretary for security assistance, Dr. Joseph S. Nye. Afterwards, accompanied by top officials of the Energy Research and Development Administration — ERDA — he will attend the Salzburg meeting convened by IAEA to discuss issues associated with nuclear fuel cycles.

Both sets of talks will give the Americans the chance to explain in detail just what Carter has in mind in his proposals for:

—An international study aimed at developing nuclear fuels which do not yield pure plutonium, which is the stuff that can give A-bombs their bang.

—Prospects for some sort of international system to store spent nuclear fuel that will not need to be used any more, perhaps, as ERDA is thinking, in deep holes under 4,000 meters of oceanic water.

—Possibilities for creating a new-style world bank of slightly enriched uranium which would assure foreign countries of access to nuclear fuels egeless of any change in the policies of their chief suppliers — who are Americans.

After his London and Salzburg talks with nuclear supplier and user nations — from South Africa to South Korea — Nye will report to Carter in London, where the President will be attending, in early May, an economic summit conference.

The United States has managed to arrange, over French and West German objections, that the conference work program should include a discussion of nuclear spread. At this meeting Carter intends making a big pitch for allied support of his over-all energy program despite conflicting commercial and marketing interests.

Earlier this month, before publicly shelving U.S. plutonium-producing options, Carter consulted with several allied governments on his ideas.

He got distinctly frosty reactions from Japan, Germany, France and even the British, who endorsed his aims but were not at all bowled over by his actual proposals.

In London the President intends making a major declaration explaining his approach to the problem of checking the spread of nuclear weapons. And by the accounts of his aides he intends seeking their active backing.

In Salzburg, presidential aides will try to enlist the understanding of delegates from nations dubbed as "near-nuclear," meaning they could go nuclear within months if they made the political decision to do so.

"It's going to be a period of persuasion and we're going to show anyone interested the results of our researches," Nye told a newsman. "We've stated our policies for the mediumterm future on the basis of deep thought."

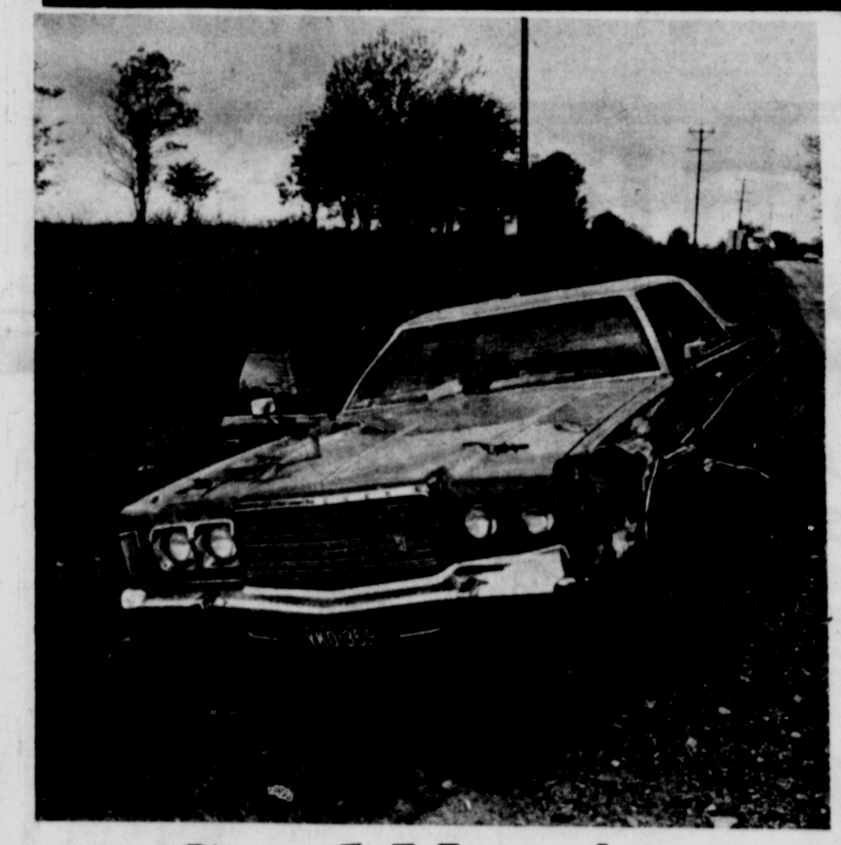

He suggested the survival of mankind could be at stake, because a runaway spread among nonnuclear states of weapons technology could destabilize world balance.

The pursuer and pursued

Triangle dispute ends in apparent suicide

CHARLESTON — Law enforcement officials are treating the death of Patrick Lynn Bishop, 38, of Cairo, Ill. as a suicide, but an official ruling had not been made Saturday as investigation of the bizarre case continued.

Bishop apparently shot himself shortly after 3 p.m. Friday in his car, officers said, about the same time his former wife was swearing out a warrant for his arrest.

Mississippi County Coroner Elgin McMikle said suicide was suspected Friday, but did not make an official ruling and was out of town Saturday.

Bishop's body was found in a car parked on the south shoulder of Highway 60-62, between the railroad tracks and the west city limits of Charleston.

He had been shot once in the right temple, and a .22- caliber rifle was found laying across his lap.

A passing motorist, Jeanette Oliphant of East Prairie, notified Police Chief Bob Ritchey about 3:13 p.m. Friday.

She said she noticed Bishop's head lying back and attempted to shake him awake. After noticing the blood, she assumed he was dead.

After unsuccessfully trying to stop other motorists to help, she drove into Charleston and notified the police.

About this same time, at 3:05 p.m. Friday, Bishop's former wife, Carol, and a companion, Darrell Danner, 34, of Columbia, went to the Charleston police station to swear out a warrant for Bishop's arrest.

They claimed that Bishop tried to run them off the road and shot at them, causing them to wreck in their car.

The Bishops reportedly had been divorced about a year.

Bishop was born May 15, 1939 in Phoenix, Ariz., to John and Mildred Bishop of Poplar Bluff.

He was manager of Burkhart Manufacturing Co. in Cairo, a veteran of the Air Force and a member of South Poplar Bluff General Baptist Church.

Other survivors include: two sons, Michael D. Bishop and Patrick Lynn Bishop of the home; one daughter, Angela Marie Bishop of the home; five brothers, Richard Bishop, stationed with the Air Force at Edwards (Calif.) Air Force Base and Jim, Dale, Wayne and Bud Bishop of Poplar Bluff.

Services are scheduled in Cotrell Funeral Chapel at Poplar Bluff with the Rev. Royce Schanda officiating. The time of services has not been set.

Burial will follow in Memorial Gardens Cemetery at Poplar Bluff.

11 injured in traffic accidents

One person was injured seriously, another suffered moderate injuries andnine others received minor injuries in five area traffic accidents Friday and Saturday, highway patrol officials announced.

A two-vehicle accident at 8:50 p.m. Friday occurred 15 miles northwest of Poplar Bluff on Highway 60 when a station wagon driven east by James Mac Davis, 34, of Centerville swerved into the westbound lane to avoid anohter eastbound vehicle and collided with a car driven west by Edgar Mizell, 34, of Ellsinore.

A passenger in the Davis car, Karen Sue Davis, 32, of Centerville, received serious injuries. Davis and two other passengers in his vehicle, James Davis, 4, and Carmen Davis, 9, received minor injuries, as did Mizell and a passenger in his car, Darlene Woods, 32, of Ellsinore. All five victims were taken to Doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

A Shook man received moderate injuries in a single- car accident at 9 p.m. Friday, six miles south of Greenville on Route D.

The accident occurred when a station wagon driven south by Biven Mitchem, 60, struck a slick spot and ran off the road and struck a culvert when the driver lost control of the vehicle.

Mitchem was taken to Veterans Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

Two men received minor injuries in a two-car accident at 11:30 p.m. Friday at the intersection of Highways 60 and 153 in Stoddard County.

The accident happened when a car driven north on Highway 153 by Clementine Terry Thomas, 43, of Lilbourn pulled into the path of a westbound van driven by Marshall Ward, 41, of Scott City.

Both drivers received injuries but the patrol had no record of either being taken to a hospital.

A rural Bernie man received minor injuries at 9:50 a.m. Saturday, three miles south of Dexter on Highway 25, when the car he was driving north came up behind a vehicle making a left turn, and he lost control of his car on wet pavement and ran off the road.

Willie Bomar, 55,of Bernie Route One received injuries and was taken to Comeau Clinic in Dexter.

A young Maryland Heights motorists received minor injuries in a one- car accident at 4:30 p.m. Saturday on Route E seven miles southwest of Doniphan.

The accident occurred when a northbound car driven by Danny Kreisman, 16, ran off the left side of the road and struck a tree at a high rate of speed.

Tallapoosa man dies of beating injuries

TALLAPOOSA--Ira Hennon Smith, 69, was brutally beaten about 7 p.m. Friday at his home and died less than two hours later at a Kennett hospital.

Law enforcement officials reportedly are searching for a white male 20-30 years old, weighing 160-170 pounds with reddish brown hair and red mustache.

The suspect was driving a white color car with a loud muffler, according to the New Madrid County Sheriff's Department, which reported Saturday night that the case was still under investigation and no arrests had been made.

The highway patrol reported that the slaying occurred after a young man came to the house and asked Mrs. Smith if he could talk to her husband about some old tires.

Her husband was in a shed in the back of the house, Mrs. Smith told the man, who went out to the shed.

He left about 10 minutes later.

Mrs. Smith later went to check on her husband and found him lying on the floor, beaten about the head with a lawn mower blade. The blade was found across Smith's face and right shoulder.

Smith's billfold and its contents--ID and about $300--were missing.

He was taken to Dunklin County Memorial Hospital at Kennett, where he died about 8:55 p.m. Friday.

The case is being investigated by the Missouri Highway Patrol and New Madrid County sheriff's and coroner's departments.

Smith was born Nov. 17, 1907 in Prentice County, Miss., to the late Charles S. and Josie King Smith.

On Nov. 13, 1948 in Calhoun City, Miss., he married Wilma Winters, who survives.

He was a member of the Southern Baptist Church at Holcomb and the Clarkton Masonic Lodge.

Other survivors include: four sons, Hennon Smith of Grenada, Miss., Quinton Frank Smith of Tallapoosa, Linden Junior Smith of Anaheim, Calif., and Julius Callums of Jackson, Miss.; four daughters, Rosalean Stanford of Mishawaka, Ind., Mrs. L. G. Patton of Columbus, Miss., Marie Laverne Johnson of Holcomb and Josey Martin of Campbell; two brothers, William Smith of Independence and Wesley Wayne Smith of Birmingham, Ala.; one sister, Audie Parker of Birmingham; two half brothers, J. C. Dees of Ballwin and Roy Dees of Chicago; one half sister, Irene Kimbrough of Tupeolo, Miss.; and 36 grandchildren and one great-grandson.

One son, Gerald Malcolm Smith, preceded him in death.

Services are scheduled at 2 p.m. Wednesday in Bradshaw Funderal Home at Malden with the Rev. Paul Cannon officiating.

Burial will follow in Stanfield Cemetery at Clarkton.

Hunters shot when mistaken for turkeys

NEW MADRID — A Lilbourn man is in the intensive care unit at Southeast Hospital in Cape Girardeau — his condition described as being between fair and serious — as a result of being shot in an apparent accident while wild turkey hunting early Staurday morning.

Lonnie Wayne Ponder, 19, was shot by Harold Dial of Portageville after he reportedly mistook Ponder and a compansion, Jimmy Rice of Lilbourn, for a pair of turkeys.

Ponder received pellet wounds from the waist up fired from a 12-gauge pump shotgun. Rice received pellet wounds to his left shoulder and underside of his left hand.

Both wree taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital at Sikeston, where Rice was treated and released and Ponder was treated, then transferred to Southeast Missouri Hospital.

Ponder statedthat he thought the shooting was accidental, but due to his condition officers did not try to question him further.

Rice said he and Ponder were beside a road, one on one side and the other on the other side, waiting for turkeys.

After waiting awhile, he noticed another man — Dial — up the road, concealed behind some brush. That man blew a couple of calls on his turkey call, Rice said.

A few minutes later, the man fired, with some of the pellets striking Ponder and a few hitting Rice.

Dial said he had given a couple of turkey calls and then noticed what he thought was two turkeys up the road, one a hen and the other a gobbler.

What he thought to be the gobbler — Ponder — moved around quite a bit and spread his feathers several times, Dial continued, but what he believed to be the hen — Rice — didn't move much.

Rice said Ponder had been moving his arms around due to mosquitoes.

A report was filed at the hospital with the Sikeston Department of Public Safety, which contacted the New Madrid County Sheriff's Department by radio, advising of the incident and of the report filed.

The sheriff's department Saturday night released no information on the shooting.

2 arrested for farm theft

CHARLESTON — The Mississippi County Sheriff's Department made two arrests Friday and are continuing an inves' gation into the theft of farm chemicals Thursday Deputy Sheriff Dennis Turley said Saturday.

Arrested were Lindsay Sloan and Walter Lindell, ages unavailable, of rural Wyatt, in connection with a break-in April 16 at the Mac Davis home in Wyatt.

Stolen items recovered by the sheriff's department include a riding lawn mower, air compressor, air tank, grease gun, oil and tools.

They were found in a wooded area outside Wyatt, Turley said.

The two have been charged with two counts of breaking and entering, burglary and stealing more than $50. They are being held in the Mississippi County jail at Charleston under bonds of $2,500 each.

Taken were nine cans of trifluralin, a herbicide.

Spring forward, Fall back

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the world seems a bit ahead of you today, chances are you're still on standard time.

Daylight Saving Time went into effect officially at 2 a.m. EST today — thus making it 3 a.m. EDT. It perhaps steals an hour's sleep, but it gives back an extra hour of daylight in the evening. It will last six months, until the last Sunday in October.

So your clocks should be turned ahead an hour, the easy reminder being Spring forward, Fall back. Time after time.

Today's news in brief

Eagleton names judge choice

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Senator Thomas F. Eagleton, D+Mo., has named a former campaign manager as his choice for U.S. District Court judge in St. Louis, the St. Louis Post+Dispatch said Saturday.

The newspaper said Eagleton picked Edward L. Filippine, 46. Filippine ran Eagleton's St. Louis office from January 1969 to June 1974 and ran Eagleton's successful 1974 campaign for re-election.

The Post said the White House, the Department of Justice and Eagleton's office all refused to confirm or deny that Filippine was Eagleton's choice.

A pacancy on the federal bench was created when Judge John K. Regan decided to go to "senior status" on April 8.

Filippine was born in St. Louis and graduated from St. Louis University and St. Louis University Law School. Since 1974 he has practiced law, concentrating on civil cases.

Under the Constitution, federal judges are appointed by the president and confirmed by the senate. In picking new federal judges, presidents have traditionally bowed to the suggestions of senators from their own party. Eaglton and President Jimmy Carter are Democrats.

Farmer getting more money

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) — Missouri's state director of agriculture said what the farmer is going to have to have to stay alive financially is more than one-third of every dollar that is spent for food.

Jack Runyan also estimated that is what farmers are getting now and said it is a larger share than they have ever gotten before.

Runyan made his comments in a speech for a Saturday night meeting of the agriculture club at Missouri Western State College in St. Joseph.

He said a main problem facing newcomers to agriculture is raising the capital needed for land, equipment and operations. This, he said, makes it even more important that the farmer get a greater cash return and margin of profit.

Runyan is a veteran livestock dealer and is the principal operator of a large farming operation he owns with two brothers near Easton, Mo., about 10 miles east of St. Joseph.

Kidnaper bond set at $1.5 million

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Gary Arlan Mitchell, 19, was put under $1.5 million bond when arraigned Saturday for a kidnaping that ended with the spectacular escape of a young mother and her 22-month-old son.

Mrs. Michael Hernandez, 23, grasped her little boy and jumped from the Hernandez car Thursday evening as her abductor slowed down on a ramp from Interstate 35 to a main street in adjoining Kansas City, Kan.

Mrs. Hernandez estimated the car was going 45 miles an hour when she opened the door and jumped out on her back.

Her clothes were decimated as she skidded along the roadway, and she lost consciousness at least momentarily. Eric rolled about 20 feet beyond her, but neither had more than bruises and scrapes.

Police reported they arrested Mitchell a short time later in the Hernandez car.

Besides two charges of kidnaping, Mitchell was arraigned on a charge of robbery and another of armed criminal conduct. A preliminary hearingwas set tentatively for May 4, and he was returned to the county jail.

The escapde started about 6 p. m. Thursday at the Crown Center hotel, apartment and shopping complex. Mrs. Hernandez had parked in a driveway and she and Eric were waiting for Hernandez, who is a tailor at the center's store.

Police quoted Mrs. Hernandez as saying a man came from behind the car, opened the door and forced her to move from behind the wheel. She said he had a small pistol, which he kept pointed at her as he drove.

Experts to cap oil slick

STAVANGER, Norway (AP) — Oil well "blowout" experts flew in from Texas Saturday to try to cap a burst pipe spreading a huge oil slick in the center of the North Sea. Officials said they feared it could become Europe's worst oil spill disaster.

A 180-foot-high fountain of crude oil was spurting from the Phillips Petroleum Co. offshore drilling rig "Bravo" in the Ekofisk field, 180 miles southwest of this Norwegian oil center.

The rig's 112 crewmen were evacuated safely after the pipe broke late Friday night.

Officials said the oil was gushing out at the rate of about 49,000 gallons an hour. The slick was about 12 miles long and 1.2 miles wide as darkness fell Saturday night. It was drifting to the southeast.

Norwegian authorities warned of possible severe pollution in a few days on the southern coast of Norway, about 160 miles from the well, and on Denmark's southern Jutland coast, 180 miles away, depending on wind and weather conditions.

Phillips flew in one of the world's foremost blowout specialists, Red Adair, from Houston, Tex. A company spokesman said members of Adair's crew inspected the platform from the air Saturday evening.

How the Adair team planned to try to shut off the gusher was not known. A Phillips spokesman in London said it might be possible to stop the flow with a safety valve some 200 feet below the seabed or with the "blowout preventer" that was being installed when the blowout occurred.

Either solution would depend on the amount of damage caused by the blowout, he said. Both methods would require putting men back on the rig.

Phelps accuses Teasdale

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Lt. Gov. William C. Phelps said it is not unusual for Missouri to have a governor and lieutenant governor of differing political parties but it surely is strange to have a part-time governor and full-time lieutenant governor.

The 43-year-old lieutenant governor made his crack in a pep talk Saturday to a statewide meeting of Missouri Young Republicans.

Phelps accused the Democratic administration of Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale of going head-hunting against everyone who was appointed to a state post during the Republican administration of the previous four years.

Phelps referred to Teasdale's appointment of James Helbig, a bookkeeper in the St. Louis license collector's office, to replace Robert L. Morrison as state fire marshal.

Morrison had been fire chief at Lee's Summit, Mo., for nine years when Gov. Christopher S. Bond appointed him the state's first fire marshal in 1973. Helbig once was fire chief of Crestwood, a St. Louis suburb, and served as a St. Louis County fire marshal a dozen years ago.

Phelps, who is from Nevada, Mo., and is a former state representative, gave up his law practice in Kansas City and pledged he would be a full-time lieutenant governor when he and Bond in 1972 broke the long Democratic stranglehold on Missouri's two top state offices.

Phelps cast himself in the role of state ombudsman and was assigned to be state coordinator of volunteer services.

Teasdale, also a Kansas City lawyer, upset Bond in last fall's gubernatorial campaign, but Phelps squeeked through in his bid for reelection.

Numerous critics have complained that Teasdale has been slow in setting up a new administration and has been lazy in the governor's job.

Second IN COMMAND

By DALE FORBIS
Daily Standard Sportswriter

It seems all good baseball teams go just about as far as their pitching will carry them. the baseball Cardinals are going good right because of the success of starters Bob Forsch and John Denny and rookie John Urrea out of the bullpen.

The man who said, "Pitching is 90 percent of baseball," knew what he was talking about.

A mini-quiz: What major league coach-scout coined the phrase, "Good field, no hit," when describing a prospect? Hint: He was a Cardinal and he isn't with us any more.

The answer is at the bottom of the column.

Redbird outfielder Heity Cruz received a batting tip from hitting coach Mo Mozzali and says he's ready to go now. If Mozazli can put some pop in the Puetro Rican's stick--and recent games seem to show he has--the veteran scout has earned his ride at the major league level.

Latest quote has Keith Hernandez saying "The Phillies don't have enough pitching to stop us."

Friday's 10-1 game seems to support that statement.

Look elsewhere on these (Sports) pages for a nice letter mailed us from Poplar Bluff coach Jim King.

It is especially gratifying to receive the respect of the professionals--the people close to the sporting situation and who know what is going on.

Wet weather cost the Sikeston Bulldogs a pair of games this past week, including a 1 p.m. game Saturday against Lone Oak High School from Paducah, Ky. Two games have been washed out against arch-rival Cape Central, a team that improves every time out. The Tigers boast one of the district's finest pitchers in Lacey Bernard.

Indications are that the Bulldogs will try to reschedule the games with Central and pick up another opponent or two, before or during the district tournament. The team needs the playing time since recent efforts, especially on the defensive side, have not been up to par.

The Dogs did come from behind for the 7-6 win against Paducah Tilghman, only the second time they've accopmplished that this year. Of course, they haven't even been behind that much.

Three members of the Sikeston Saints are listed on the roster at Southeast Missouri state. All are at least part-time starters and two of them three have done well for the streaking Indians who had won 11 games in a row until a Saturday loss at Kirksville.

Infielder Bill Schatzlery recently (last weekend) slapped a three-run homer to win a game for the Indians. He has won a job in the starting lineup, at second and as a designated-hitter, with a good effort for the team. Schatzlery, a sophomore, is hitting .275 and his 11 hits have been good for seven runs batted in.

Senior infielder Grant Dambach has five homers and a .338 average. Last weekend Dambach reached base eight straight times with a 7-for-7 doubleheader added to a free pass. He has played second and short.

A third infielder,Rick Eisenbach, has spent most of the year injured, resulting in a low .182 average, after hitting .308 as a freshman. Eisenbach plays third.

Speaking of the Indians of SeMo University. They have walloped 38 homeruns in 22 games, five more than they hit during last year's 26-15 season. season, . They, of course, are aided by ridiculously short fences. But, a recent weekend of eight homers in three games at UM-Rolla show that the power is real.

Answer to mini quiz: Old Cardinal fans will remember thirdbase coach Mike Gonzalez, who was featured in a recent article in the bible of baseball, The Sporting News. Gonzaleaz, while scouting a possible prospect for the expansive Cardinal minor leagues coined the succint phrase which indicates that a player can catch and throw the ball, but not hit it.

Babb optimistic about 1977. . . now

By CHARLIE FRANCIS
Daily Standard Sports Editor

Charlie Babb admits that he was not exactly optimistic about his future in professional football after his injury in the final game of the 1976 season.

"You always expect the worst," said the Miami Dolphins' strong safety, who hails from Charleston. "And you always know when you've been hurt seriously."

Babb culminated a three-week visit to his old stomping grounds by speaking at the Charleston Man of the Year Banquet Thursday night. After receiving many congrautlations and hellos from friends and fans, he took time to chat with this reporter briefly about the injury that almost brought an end to his brief pro career.

"I was going into a pile," remembered the former Bluejay and Memphis State star, "and my cleat got caught.'

Two ligaments were torn in Bab's left knee. It took two operations by Dolphin team surgeon Dr. Herbert Virgin - - ten days apart -- to correct the damage. "The injury was so severe that they couldn't do it all in one operation."

But now, over four months later, all is progressing smoothly. "They seem to think I've come a long a lot better than they expected," reported Babb about the opinion of the Dolphin medical experts.

His left leg was in a cast for nine weeks -- three weeks longer than usual for such an injury. Then began the slow program of rehabilitation. "There are two main things involved -- getting strength back into the leg and getting flexibility back into the leg."

The Dolphins, who drafted Babb fifth in the 1972 college draft after earning Missouri Valley All-Conference honors for two straight years as a defensive back at Memphis State, have their safety on a program of leg weights and stretching exercises designed to get him ready for action when training camp begins this summer.

He hasn't done any running on the knee just yet, wanting to bring it along very slowly. "But it feels pretty good."

"Injuries are a part of the game," admitted the articulate athlete, who ironically made only second team All-Conference at the safety position at Charleston High School. He was the SeMo circuit's All-Conference quarterback in 1968.

Because of the frequencies of injury to NFL players (the average career is less than five years in duration), Charlie says that he is already planning for the future.

"I've invested in a restaurant in Memphis," said the Miami resident, who resides there with his wife Leslie. He said also that he was contemplating going into a construction venture with some acquaintances in Florida.

He said he would be interested in coaching some day, maybe on the high school or youth level. "But it would have to be part time."

Babb didn't get much playing time in the early days of his pro career. "I was backing up Jake Scott and Dick Anderson, who were making the Pro Bowl every year. I asked Don Shula (Dolphin coach) to trade me, but he said no. I just wanted to play."

He got his break two years ago when Scott's contract dispute gave him valuable playing time. Nagging injuries to Anderson last year helped Babb beat out the veteran and land a starting job.

He received national recognition in 1972 when he blocked a punt and returned it for a touchdown to give the Dolphins a 20-14 playoff win over the Cleveland Browns.

Cards win big, lose big

The St. Louis Cardinals looked like world-beaters Friday night, a look that disappeared against rookie lefty Randy Lersch 24 hours later.

With hard-hitting Keith Hernandez supplying the puch, the Cards rolled over the Phillies 10-1 in a Friday night game. Hernandez belted a homer and a triple and went 3-for-5 with five runs batted in. Ted Simmons kept the hot bat going also, raising his mark to .412 with three hits.

Wayne Twitchell, the starter, took the loss.

The Phillies scored their only run in the sixth on a fielder's choice.

St. Louis took a 9-4 record into Saturday night's game. Philadelphia dropped to 3-7.

The Phillies, who had been giving Manager Danny Ozark headaches with their lack of hitting, bombarded four Cardinal pitchers for 14 hits. They got two runs in the seventh on shortstop Garry Templeton's throwing error after singles by Garry Maddox and Larry Bowa.

Maddox had four hits and two RBI, while Jay Johnstone had three safeties.

The Phillies, who managed only one run off John Denny Friday night, battered Cardinal right-hander Bob Forsch for six runs on nine hits in four innings.

The Phillies got five more runs in the fifth. A walk to Mike Schmidt, Luzinski's double and Davey Johnson's single up the middle scored two runs. Maddox drove in two more with a double to right.

The Cardinals, who lambasted Philadelphia pitching for 10 runs on 13 hits in the series opener, managed only four hits off Lerch through the first six innings.

The closest the Cards came to scoring in the first six innings was in the fourth when Hector Cruz and Ted Simmons singled and Hernandez advanced both with a sacrifice bunt. Ken Reitz followed with a pop to right and Johnstone nabbed Cruz trying to score from third.

Mizzou splits

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Pinch runner Craig Schroeder stole home with the winning run to give Iowa State a 6-5 win over Missouri in a split of Saturday's Big Eight doubleheader.

The Cyclones had tied the game on a bases-loaded walk in the last of the seventh inning when Schroeder pulled his heroics on pitcher Mike Pfautsch, the third Tiger pitcher used.

Missouri won the opener 5-1, bunching four runs in the sixth inning. The Tigers scored on singles by Jim English and Ric Hereth, a double by Jim Leavitt, and another on a wild pitch.

The split left Missouri with a 5-1 Big Eight conference mark and Iowa State 2-4. Overall the Tigers are 25-13, while Iowa State is 12-18.

The two teams play a double header here Sunday.

By BEN THOMAS
AP Sports Writer

The Philadelphia 76ers won 75 per cent of their regular-season games against the Boston Celtics. The 76ers are maintaining almost the same pace against the defending National Basketball Association champion Celtics in the playoffs.

In fact, the 76ers can gain a 3-1 edge over the Celtics in Sunday's televised playoff game at Boston. That is the same margin Philadelphia had over Boston during the 82-game regular campaign.

A 109-100 victory by Philadelphia Friday night gave the 76ers a 2-1 lead in their best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinal series against Boston.

Also Sunday, the Denver Nuggets are at Portland and the Houston Rockets at Washington, in playoff series deadlocked 1-1. Los Angeles takes a 2-0 lead to Golden State in the other playoff series. All four will be televised regionally.

The winners of the Philadelphia-Boston and Houston-Washington series will meet for the Eastern Conference crown while the survivors of the other two series clash for the Western Conference title.

"If we don't win Sunday, we're going to be in trouble," understated Boston's Jo Jo White.

Although the Celtics are favored Sunday—as they were Friday night, they will have to do better. "We had problems in the first half," said Celtics Coach Tom Heinsohn. "We couldn't score early. We weren't running or moving. We've got to get on track Sunday, or else."

That else means the 76ers would take a 3-1 lead back to Philadelphia for Game 5 of the series Wednesday night. That might not be all bad for the Celtics, however, because Boston's only victory thus far ir the series was at Philadelphia.

The tone has been set for the Denver-Portland series, says Nuggets Coach Larry Brown, whose team outmuscled the Trail Blazers 121-110 Friday night, tying the series.

"It was as physical a game as I've ever seen," said Brown.

The Trail Blazers lost Bill Walton because of fouls halfway through the final period Friday night. Only then was Denver able to take control of the game and win.

Meanwhile, Washington Coach Dick Motta is cautioning his players about relaxing Sunday because the Bullets are playing on their home court at Landover, Md.

"The Rockets beat us in the showdown game of the regular season at our place," Motta recalled. "I just don't think the home court will be that important. This is going to be a long series."

Golden State is hoping its home-court edge over the Lakers during the regular season continues Sunday.

Where are the other 71?

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — What happened to the other 71?

Entries were sent in for 87 cars, just short of an all-time record, for the May 29 Indianapolis 500. Practice begins for it in two weeks.

But Saturday, when practice opened for Sunday's $100,000 Trentonian 200 for Indianapolis-type cars, only 16 cars were present.

Among the missing were such notables as Al and Bobby Unser, and A.J. Foyt.

What happened to them all?

"Everybody has some excuse or other ... too far to tow, not ready, car still being prepared for Indy, not enough money. But no one here is too happy about it," said one official. "If there are 87 cars around capable of running Indy, there ought to be enough to fill the field (22) here."

It isn't the fault of the organizers, including former Ontario (Calif.) Motor Speedway President Jim Cook, who offer one of the largest purses ever, have spent a bundle of money fixing up and painting the aging 1½-mile speedway, and have worked hard to sell tickets. So far, the advance sale is one of the best in history.

It helps, though, that among the 19 entries received there are Mario Andretti, making his first appearance here in three years, two-time INdy winner Johnny Rutherford, national champion Gordon Johncock and Roger McCluskey.

McRae's single leads Royals

SEATTLE (AP) — Designated hitter Hal McRae's two-out RBI single in the seventh inning and a throwing error by Seattle centerfielder Ruppert Jones accounted for two Kansas City runs and helped the Royals to an 8-6 victory over the Seattle Mariners Saturday.

With the score tied 5-5 in the seventh, Frank White reached first on a bunt single with two out and then stole second. George Brett was walked by Diego Segui, Seattle's third pitcher before McRae singled to center, scoring White from second.

Brett also scored on the play on a throwing error by Jones, giving Kansas City a 7-5 lead.

The Royals' final run came in the eighth when Amos Otis walked, stole second and scored on Al Cowens' single. That offset a run by Seattle in the bottom of the eighth.

Kansas City scored five unearned runs in the fifth to take a 5-2 lead. Fred Patek had a two-run single and McRae a two-run double in the burst.

Seattle tied the game 5-5 with three unearned runs after two were out in the sixth inning. Bill Stein's two-run triple scored Jones and Dan Meyer, and Bob Stinson's sharp single off Brett's glove scored Stein.

Seattle had taken a 2-0 lead in the fourth on Meyer's two-run double. Steve Braun singled with one out and moved to second when Royals first baseman John Mayberry couldn't handle Juan Bernhardt's sharp grounder. Both runners advanced on a passed ball before Meyer delivered his hard smash down the first base line.

Royals starter Dennis Leonard, 1-0, scattered nine hits for the victory, with relief help from Larry Gura in the ninth. Seattle starter Stan Thomas, 1-1, suffered the loss.

Seattle collected its final run in the eighth on Stein's two-out single that scored Bernhardt from second base. Stein had two hits and three RBI for Seattle, which lost its fourth straight game.

McRae had three hits and three RBI for Kansas City and extended his hitting streak to seven games. He also boosted his team-leading batting average to .426.

Thomas had retired the Royals in order in the first three innings, and faced only three batters in the fourth with the help of a double play before he was rocked in the fifh.

Leonard, in his second start of the season, struck out five and walked two in his eight innings before leaving in favor of Larry Gura, who picked up his second save in as many days.

Baseball camp set 1st day of May

The Sikeston Junior Babe Ruth League will sponsor a one-day youth baseball camp for area boys age 13-15 from 1:30 to 3:30 on May 1, 1977, at the Sikeston Sports Complex. There will be no charge for the camp.

Many of the instructors have been associated with professional teams. This is an opportunity for all young baseballers to learn and participate in the basic fundamentals and good sportsmanship of the game.

Welch resigns

CARUTHERSVILLE--Harv Welch, who piloted the Caruthersville Tigers to a combined 20-9-1 during three years of coaching, resigned Wednesday as football coach.

Welch said that he has agreed to take the post of football coach and athletic director at Willard, Mo., a class 3-A school of about 1,000 students. "It's a good opportunity for someone who wants to build a program," said Welch, who added that Willard is also his wife's home town. Willard is near Springfield and is the largest member of the Central Ozark Athletic Conference.

School officials would not speculate as to whether a replacement for Welch would be chosen from among present personnel or from outside the school system.

SJBR tryouts to be held today

Tryouts for the Sikeston Junior Babe Ruth League will be held this afternoon at 2:00 at VFW Stadium, according to Jim Green, the new SJBR commissioner.

Candidates must be 13 years old on or before August 1 and must not turn 16 before August 1. Players should bring a birth certificate and a baseball glove.

Anyone who cannot attend this afternoon's tryout can tryout Monday night at 7:00 p.m. at the s stadium.

H. H. "Bud" Townsend Jr. of New Madrid bagged an 18-pound gobbler at 6:30 a.m. Thursday on New Madrid County Sportsman Club ground on Donaldson Point near New Madrid. His bird was the 16th checked at the Missouri Conservation Commission station at New Madrid after the season opened Wednesday morning.

Dear Dale:

I thought I'd write a few lines to let you know I appreciated the article in "Second In Command."

Indeed their are several people in Poplar Bluff who are definitely behind me. I just hope the surrounding communities understand Poplar Bluff is a small city of 16-20 thousand people and yet only a handful have caused me problems.

Dale, sometimes I think a few people have forgotten the intentions and purposes of High School Athletics; notice I said a FEW people.

Thanks again,

Hastings throws no-hitter for SeMo Indians

KIRKSVILLE — Lefty Trae Hastings' no-hitter highlighted a semi-successful three-game series for the SeMo Indians Friday and Saturday. The Indians won two of the three-game set, but fell farther behind first- place Maryville, winners of two.

Northeast won the first game Friday afternoon, beating frosh Steve Hosick 4-1. Bulldog starter Dan Fausett fired a three-hitter at SeMo and his mates touched Hosick for three hits and three walks during a four-run sixth. David Gross had a double and scored SeMo's run in the fifth.

Hastings won a classic pitcher's duel with Dexter grad Mike Lowes in the first first game Saturday afternoon. The hard- throwing Indian hurler fanned 14 batters and walked six, overshadowing a fine three-hitter by Lowes.

The extra- inning game was decided in the ninth when Gross doubled, went to third on a wild pitch and scored when Grant Dambach deposited a perfect suicide squeeze bunt.

Kirksville had the bases loaded with one out in the fifth for their biggest threat to Hastings. He fanned the next two. SeMo loaded the sacks in the seventh and eight, but couldn't score.

Don Beuchting threw a shutout in Saturday's second game and got six- run backing from his mates in picking up a 6-0 verdict. Both sides got only five hits, giving SeMo a meager total of 11 safeties in the three-game weekend set.

With the sacks filled a two out in the first inning, Ralph Kuenn lofted a long fly to center that was dropped. With the runners moving on the pitch, two runs scored for a 2-0 lead.

Mike Samples two - run single in the fourth made the lead 4-0 and the Indians scored single runs int he sixth and seventh. Damcahc's single drove in the final tally.

SeMo now holds an 11-4 conference record with three games to go. Maryville, the leader, is 7-1 with six games left. The championship is decided on a percentage basis.

'Watchdogs' join Russian fishers

FALMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — Far from home on the North Atlantic, eight Americans are living among Russian fishermen aboard Soviet trawlers.

The seven men and one woman are federal employes assigned to learn first hand how foreigners are working the waters claimed by the United States under the 200-mile limit.

"They are our watchdogs," said James Medeiros, field director of the new venture for the National Marine Fisheries Service.

On April 11, a Coast Guard tugboat rendezvoused a few miles off the Massachusetts coast with two Soviet fishing vessels. The Americans climbed aboard to be taken to the fishing grounds 130 miles southeast of Nantucket Island.

There the eight Americans split up, each going alone to live on a trawler in the Soviet fleet until the Coast Guard picks them up again this coming Saturday outside Narragansett Bay.

The trawlers, ranging in length from 180 to 300 feet, are like floating factories, catching fish, cleaning and freezing them and grinding up the leftovers as fishmeal.

"The Soviet ships are large and relatively comfortable," said Medeiros. "Our people have their own staterooms. They eat their meals in the wardroom with the officers.

"They'll be treated like VIPs. They are representatives of the U.S. government. The foreigners are motivated somewhat by fear, because they know we're checking for violations. They call you 'Mr. Inspector.' I'm sure we'll have no problem with treatment."

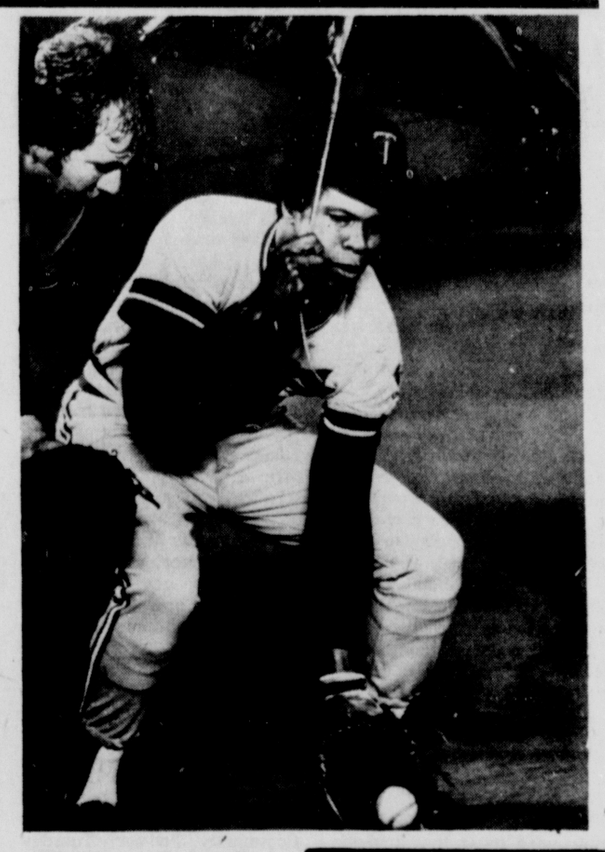

Since the 200-mile limit went into effect in March, foreigners are still allowed to fish within U.S. waters. Seventeen foreign ships are now fishing for hake off New England, all of them Russian.

But they must have permits that limit where they can work, how much they can catch and what species they can keep. The permits also require them to allow American observers to live aboard.

The observers work 12-hour shifts. They dissect samples of the catch to determine age and feeding habits. This information will be used by federal biologists to help set next year's fishing quotas.

Observers also make sure the foreigners save only the allowed species, use proper equipment and keep accurate records. If they spot a serious violation, they can call in a Coast Guard inspection team.

Medeiros expects that when the observers return, their first complaint will be about the Russian food.

Yanks win 3rd in a row

By The Associated Press

Graig Nettles' two-run single keyed a six-run third inning that carried the New York Yankees to their third consecutive victory, a 9-3 triumph over the Cleveland Indians in the first game of a Saturday doubleheader.

The second game was rained out.

The Yankees' outburst was aided by three of Cleveland's four errors in the game, giving Dock Ellis, 1-1, all the help he needed.

Cleveland starter Al Fitzmorris, 0-2, walked Chris Chambliss to open the inning. Bucky Dent hit an apparent double play ball, but second baseman Duane Kuiper dropped the throw at second for an error. Willie Randolph's infield hit loaded the bases.

Thurman Munson's groundout produced the first of his three runs batted in for the game. Reggie Jackson was intentionally walked to load the bases once again, but Nettles foiled the strategy by singling home Dent and Randolph for a 3-0 lead.

Mickey Rivers forced Nettles at second. A pickoff caught Rivers off first but before he could be tagged, Jackson drew a throw by starting for home. With Jackson in a rundown, catcher Ray Fosse threw wildly past third and both Jackson and Rivers scored. A throwing error by center fielder Rick Manning let in the sixth run of the inning.

In other American League day games, Manny Sanguillen had a pair of run-scoring singles as the Oakland A's edged the Chicago White Sox 3-2 and Hal McRae's two-out RBI single and Ruppert Jones' throwing error gave Kansas City a pair of runs and helped the Royals beat the Seattle Mariners 8-6.

Boston at Toronto and Baltimore at Detroit were rained out.

In National League afternoon games, Al Oliver's ninth-inning single, his fourth hit of the game, drove in the winning run as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the New York Mets 6-5; John Montefusco scattered nine hits to lead the San Francisco Giants past the Montreal Expos 4-2, and Manny Trillo's run-scoring single in the seventh inning helped the Chicago Cubs snap a four-game losing streak with a 2-1 decision over the Cincinnati Reds.

Minnesota was at Texas and Milwaukee at California in American League night action. In the National League San Diego was at Houston for a twi-night doubleheader and St. Louis was at Philadelphia and Los Angeles at Atlanta for single night games.

The Pants Story

The word pants is derived from a stock character of classic Italian comedy — "Pantalone". He wore a kind of leg covering that resembled our modern-day trousers. Later, in England, the Duke of Wellington gave the necessary impetus to the changeover from knee breeches to pants about 1815.

Suzy Snooper

Today "Suzy" is going to take us behind the curtain for a serious look at what it takes to put a show together, . or take it apart.

"Suzy went to the Greer Street fire station expecting to find fire trucks and instead she found cardboard, paint and wall to wall people...KATHY BUCKLEY , DEBBIE HODGES, PAM BEDELL, MARILY LAMBERT, SALLY LAPE, KAY COUCH, and KATIE MARSH were all there covered in some king of concoction they called paint..."Suzy" wants to ask all of you if you have ever heard of a paint that both looked and smelled like Pepto Bismol...the painting of the props and the building of the stage addition are really quite a serious job...of course when they went to put the stage addition on, they found that someone had absconded with it...there can be problems with the lighting and sound equipment also, and if there was anything that "Suzy" wanted to know she went to the lady with all the answers, CHARLOTTE YORK.

CHARLOTTE handles just about everything that goes on behind the curtain, including temperamental directors and stars...and what CHARLOTTE doesn't handle TONY HECKEMEYER does ..speaking of stars, who was that man playing the role of the famous person "Suzy" mentioned in her column last Friday...BRUCE EBBE makes a great Engelbert..the most famous person in the show though is YOU..so be sure to pick up your Red Stocking Follies' tickets from any Junior Woman's Club member or call Sara Freeman at 471-7795. See you tomorrow, love ya!

ACCIDENT PATIENTS

Accident patients treated and released Friday in the emergency room at Missouri Delta Community Hospital were:

James Blue, 28, Sikeston, minor wrist strain, Russel Hasty, 46, Sikeston, bruised thumb when caught in sewer cable; Joseph Culver, 22, Charleston, fracture d toe; Christopher James, 3, Sikeston, cut when bit bongue.

Shawn Pennington, 9, Sikeston, scratched right elbow in fall off bicycle; Brian West, 12, Sikeston, first and second degree burns on face when gas stove blew up in face; and Timothy Miller, 19 months, East Prairie, cut on forehead in fall off coffee table.

Golden Agers

The financial fortunes of older Americans are expected to improve significantly in the years ahead. Between 1975 and 1985, the personal income of those 55 years and over is project to rise from $240 billion, or about $5,000 per person, to over $360 billion, a jump of 50 per cent, The Conference Board notes. Some reasons: rising Social Security payments, a growing proportion of retirees with corporate pensions and stipends from trade unions, and an increasing number who worked during the prosperous Sixties and had the opportunity to build up their own resources for the retirement years.

BASEMENT LEAKS
Contractors-Home Owners
Now for the first time in this area YOU CAN STRUCTURALLY REPAIR CRACKED CONCRETE WITH Structural concrete bonding process.
The SCB Process is a proprietary system developed by Adhesive Engineering Company. It is the only complete epoxy injection system that can successfully repair concrete structures cracked by: shrinkage during cure; mechanical overload; temperature changes; base of foundation settlement; and human error.
High strength, low viscosity Concressive adhesives are injected full depth into fissures in concrete down to 0.002 in wide in most cases. When the injected adhesive cures, usually in a few hours., it seals the crack network completely and also restores the concrete to a monolithic load-bearing condition.
The SCB Process is the only crack repair method available from over 50 factory-trained and licensed applicators throughout the world.

SPECIAL NOW is the best time to BUY a HOME

The fact is the longer you wait the more that home is probably going to cost. It's that simple. Why? Because the factors that determine the value of housing — land, labor and materials — won't be going down. Let's face it ... they haven't for the past 30 years, and there's no reason to believe they'll start dropping now.

What about the cost of money?

First of all, mortgage money is available. The money market is a little harder to predict... it fluctuates from one time period to the next. What the money market is going to be like one year or five years from now depends on which economist you talk to.

But, we can be pretty certain about three things:

1. A certain amount of inflation is going to be part of the economic picture. This means the dollars you use to pay off your mortgage each year will be "cheaper" dollars.

2. During the first several years of your mortgage, most of your payments represent interest. Interest charges are deductible from your Federal Income Tax. And if you don't think that helps out at income tax time, talk to somebody who has a mortgage.

3. Finally, mortgage rates aren't likely to fall drastically. But if they go down, increases in other areas — land, labor, and materials would more than offset this gain.

Burglars make haul at cafe near Advance

ADVANCE--Clark's Cafe, located on Highway 25 outside of town, was broken into sometime Friday night or early Saturday morning, the Stoddard County Sheriff's Department said.

Taken were two cases of soft drinks, three packages of lard, several packages of frozen French fries, three eight-pound boxes of ground beef, at least 100 packages of cigaretts, a tape playere and several tapes.

The theft was discovered when the cafe was opened for business Saturday morning.

The building wapparently was entered through the back door.

Investigation is continuing.

Conflict of interest bill draws stiff questioning

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. AP) — A conflict of interest bill for public officials which has already been approved by the Missouri House, met some stiff questioning Wednesday night in a Senate subcommittee.

The bill, which would require state elected officials, judges, and local officials to report annually financial statements, was called "disappointing" by Senate Judiciary subcommittee Chairman John Schneider.

The St. Louis Democrat told the bill's sponsor Rep. Steve Gardner, D-Ballwin, that it does not get at conflict of interest and its drafting creates "an awful lot of problems."

Gardner said conflict of interest legislation must be strengthened to assure the public "we're doing business out in the open." He added "it has become increasingly important to restore the public's faith in government."

The bill, Gardner said, would make public officials disclose where their incomes come from and where their financial interests lie. It would establish a comprehensive code of ethics, he said.

But subcommittee member Sen. Harold Caskey, D-Butler, spoke in opposition to the bill. "You're going to have almost half the people in Missouri having to file for financial disclosure" if the bill is passed. Caskey said persons should not be punished for failing to make financial disclosures, but instead for using their government position for personal gain.

"I think it's reasonable for the public to ask a little more of you (state officials) than other persons," Gardner said.

"Why take the back door approach?" Caskey replied. "Let's make it a crime for not giving the people good, honest government."

Sen. Marvin Dinger, D-Ironton, said the bill requires people in public life to prove their innocence without any clear accusation of guilt.

Schneider indicated that the committee would probably redraft the bill before presenting it to the full Senate.

In other committee action Wednesday, a proposal to ban so-called "black boxes" used to avoid long distance telephone charges was endorsed by the House Civil and Criminal Justice Committee.

The measure, sponsored by Sen. Richard Webster, R-Carthage, creates the crime of "electronic telephone fraud" for the use, possession, transfer or construction of the mechanical and electronic devices.

A person convicted of the crime could be fined $500 and jailed for six months if the amount defrauded was less than $50. If the amount was more than $50, the penalty would be a $1,000 fine or a year in jail.

Telephone Company officials estimate the use of the devices cost the utitlities hundreds of thousands of dollars annually with those losses made up by other customers.

Three types of devices are used for the fraud, company officials said. One prevents the company from making a record of outgoing calls, a second prevents a record of incoming calls and the third is used to simulate depositing coins in a pay telephone when none are actually deposited.

The proposal, which has already been approved by the Senate, cleared the House committee on a 7-2 vote. Opposition centered around the possibility that the bill may make other activities illegal as well.

Rep. David Christian, D-Kansas City, said he had received a letter contending the bill could make possession of any device making tones illegal.

Development plan studied at Morehouse

MOREHOUSE — The Morehouse Planning Commission met April 12 for the fourth in a series of meetings designed to establish a comprehensive plan for community development.

Phil Clark, a Bootheel Regional Planning Commission representative from Malden, explained the need for an updated residential survey, and the city planning group agreed to complete the survey within the next six weeks.

The updated residential survey will be incorporated into the city's comprehensive plan, which will be used in the application of future grants for community development.

All members of the planning commission, citizens advisory committee and concerned residents are urged to attend the next meeting, which will be held after completion of the survey.

The commission, which is 100 per cent funded by the city of Morehouse, consists of Charlie Neal, mayor; Ron Launius chairman; Pete Leija, vice chairman; Sheila McKinley, secretary; Julian Hann, alderman; and Jerry Nimmo, member.

8 from area on outstanding young men list

Three Sikeston residents are among eight young men from the Missouri Bootheel have been selected for inclusion in the 1977 edition of Outstanding Young Men of America.

Those from Sikeston are David Arthur Ziegenhorn, 505 Tanner St.; Lloyd Franklin Smith, 109 Oak St.; and Jackie Clay Patterson, 725 N. Ranney St.

Other outstanding young men from this area are Joseph Allen Baker of Dexter; Daniel Joseph Bollinger, Chaffee, Roy DeWayne Bryant of Chaffee Route Two. Richard Merrel Faulkner of New Madrid Route One and Derek Linam Wheeler of Oran.

The outstanding Young Men of America Program is co-sponsored by the United States Jaycees and other leading men's civic and service organizations throughout the nation. Serving as chairman of its 12-man advisory board is Doug Blankenship, U.S. Jaycee past president.

The criteria for selection include voluntary service to community, professional leadership, academic achievement, business advancement, cultural accomplishments and civic and political participation. The program recognizes achievements of men between the ages of 21 and 36.

DECA banquet slated Monday

The Sikeston High School chapter of Distributive Education Clubs of America has announced that its annual banquet will be held on Monday in the School cafeterium, from 7 to 8:30 P.M.

The banquet is held every year to give area employers and their student employes an opportunity to express their appreciation to each other and commend them for their cooperation. The affair also emphasizes the value of the distributive education program.

This year's theme will be "A Time to Remember". The main speaker will be David Butler, last year's state DECA president and a former member of the Sikeston distributive education program. Also, Joe Langley, the current state president, will talk about the upcoming year's goal for the state distributive education programs to follow.

The program will be followed by a dinner and slide program explaining the cooperative program.

Murray drops out-of-state tuition for SeMo residents

MURRAY, Ky, — Students from 14 counties in Illinois, nine in Missouri and two in Indiana will be able to enroll at Murray State University this fall without paying out-of-state tuition.

Authorization for the fee waiver program-- aimed primarily at helping to offset recently- directed increases in tuition for out-of-state students at the university -- was given Wednesday by the Kentucky Council on Public Higher Education during a meeting in Frankfort.

The action also brings to 31 the number of counties in adjoining states from which students may enroll at Murray State this fall and pay $480 per year, the same tuition rate as Kentucky students.

In July, 1974, the council authorized the tuition waiver for students in three Tennessee counties -- Montgomery, Stewart and Henry -- and last year granted the same privilege to students in three additional West Tennessee counties -- Weakley, Obion and Lake.

The 14 Illinois counties included in the council's Wednesday authorization include: Alexander, Franklin, Gallatin, Hamilton, Hardin, Jackson, Johnson, Massac, Pope, Pulaski, Saline, Union, White and Williamson. Currently, there are 148 full-time students attending Murray State from these counties.

The nine Missouri counties involves include Bollinger, Cape Girardeau, Dunklin, Mississippi, New Madrid, Pemiscot, Perry, Scott and Stoddard. Ninety-six residents of these counties are now full-time students at the univeristy.

The two Indiana counties included are Posey and Vanderbrugh, from which 60 students presently are enrolled at the university.

Tuition for other non-Kentucky undergraduates at Murray State under the new tuition rate, effective this fall, will be $1,200 a year.

The basic hope of Murray State's administrators is that the new waiver program will help them prevent an anticipated loss in revenue and increased dormitory vacancies in the wake of the council's recently- ordered tuition increases for both Kentucky and non-Kentucky residents attending the university.

The new semester rates are: $240 for Kentucky- resident undergraduates, an increase of $30; non-Kentucky undergraduates, $600, up $125; Kentucky- resident graduate students, $275, an increase of $40; and non-Kentucky graduate students, $700, up $200.

"These increases are alarming enough, as they stand," said Murray State President Constantine W. Curris, "but when viewed from the perspective of past experiences at Murray State they become ominous.

"Between 1967 and 1973, during which time non-resident tuition was increased by $370, our non-resident undergraudate enrollment dropped by 1,000 students. Not only did this create a net loss in tuition receipts, but it also created major losses in our housing and dining program.

"It is gratifying to those of us at Murray," he went on, "that the council has authorized these special considerations to help minimize the impact of the latest non-resident tuition increase."

The Murray president has frequently noted that state policy- makers thought they were relieving Kentucky taxpayers of a financial burden by curtailing out- of- state enrollments, but the real result of that action, he said, had been a new financial burden by leaving already- constructed dormitories partially empty.

Smallpox eradicated in India

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Medical officials on Saturday declared smallpox eradicated in India, leaving only 48 known cases in the world of a disease that has killed, blinded and scarred millions of people.

The World Health Organization (WHO), which has led the campaign to wipe out the ancient disease, made the official declaration after finding India smallpox-free for almost two years.

As recently as three years ago, a virulent outbreak of a severe type of smallpox swept northern India. It afflicted 188,-000 Indians and killed 31,000.

Gulf Oil backs Carter energy program despite earnings

HOUSTON, Jerry McAfee, chairman of the board of Gulf Oil Corporation, this week said Gulf is "prepared to support enthusiastically and vigorously the constructive objectives of the President's energy program and to urge our employees, shareholders and others to join in this support."

Speaking here at Gulf's annual meeting of shareholders, McAfee said that the measures required for closing the nation's energy gap "will be difficult and painful. Some may adversely affect Gulf's interests and our corporate goals."

However, "it is important, from a national standpoint, that a plan of action be adopted, now" he said. "This country simply cannot afford to get bogged down again in an endless, and fruitless, energy debate in which every group seeks to promote its special interests at the expense of the nation's future.

Therefore, we at Gulf pledge in the months ahead to work with the Administration and the Congress in every way possible to help structure a comprehensive energy program, based on realistic, sensible and attainable goals," McAfee said.

James E. Lee, Gulf's president, later told shareholders that earnings for the first quarter of 1977 were $166 million, or 85 cents per share, representing a decline of 16 per cent from the year-ago levels of $198 million or $1.02 per share. Revenue increased more than 11 per cent to $4.84 billion from $4.35 billion a year earlier, he said.

He reported that complete earnings data is still being compiled and analyzed and that a formal earnings statement will be forthcoming in a few days. On March 21 Gulf announced that first quarter earnings would be well below those of the first quarter of 1976.

"We, of course, cannot foretell the future, but we do have reason to believe that our performance will return to a more normal level in the months ahead," Lee told the shareholders. "Much of the decline we experienced in the first quarter was caused by temporary conditions," he said. They include:

Gulf's inability to recover in the market place the full cost of the recent increase in crude oil prices imposed by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, largely due to government price controls.

Extraordinary expenses incurred in providing increased deliveries of heating oil and natural gas in the face of the past winter's extreme conditions

Declines in petrochemicals earnings, attributed to weak customer demand, heavy inventories and normal start-up costs at the Cedar Bayou olefins plant, as well as the absence of substantial investment tax credits which that facility generated in 1976.

And the decline in the value of the Canadian dollar.

"It is important to note," said Lee, "that we see no reason to alter our business plan, operating philosophy or investment strategy because of one disappointing quarter.

"In fact, we have every confidence that our strategies are properly directed and that over the longer term they will prove to be more fruitful," he said.

Lee hailed the "progress we made toward arresting the prolonged declines in our U.S. crude oil and natural gas production," and he noted that natural gas deliveries to Texas Eastern Transmission Corporation averaged more than 625 million cubic feet per day during the first 18 days of April, exceeding the "peak demand" quantity specified in the contract.

Lee observed that Gulf is proceeding with rapid development of existing leases to compensate for depletion of the company's older fields and said that nearly half of the more-than $2 billion in total capital and exploration expenditures planned for 1977 will be spent to support exploration and production efforts in the U.S.

"Currently, we have a whole or part interest in 41 wildcat wells being drilled both onshore and offshore in the U.S. and we have 25 seismic crews evaluating some 1.5 million of our onshore acres," Lee said.

"This represents more than nine per cent of all such exploratory work being conducted by the industry in the U.S.," he added.

And he said that if the validity of the Mid-Atlantic offshore (Baltimore Canyon) lease sales is upheld by the Second Federal Circuit Court of Appeals by early summer, "it still may be possible for Gulf to drill at least one of the four wildcats we had planned on our mid-Atlantic leases this year."

Regarding the two-tier pricing structure still in effect among the OPEC countries, Lee reported that Gulf is placed at a disadvantage in the marketplace although the full effect is difficult to measure. He noted a reduction in demand for some of the company's heavier high-sulfur crudes, but added that "the greater problem will be whether our refineries – both in the U.S. and abroad, can pass on these higher costs in areas where our competitors have access to lower-priced crudes."

Lee also reported that Gulf expects to produce its first U.S. uranium this year, from the Mariano mine in New Mexico, and that Gulf "made important strides during 1976 toward achieving our goal of becoming a significant coal producer and one of the largest uranium suppliers in the U.S."

McAfee opened the meeting by reiterating a goal that he had announced at his first annual meeting as Gulf's chairman last year – restoration of "our confidence in ourselves and our credibility with others."

"I repeat these words this morning because they established the philosophical path that we at Gulf endeavored to follow throughout 1976," he said, and "significant strides along that path have been taken."

Noting that the company's expanded Code of Business Principles "has been made an integral working part of our daily operations," he explained that it calls upon the company to earn a reasonable return on investment. "Furthermore, it pledges that we will do so in a climate of fairness toward our employees and customers and it recognizes the public's right to receive reliable information on our activities."

McAfee referred to the low opinion in which business is presently held by the public, saying, "today's climate of government control and regulation stems in part from a mistaken belief that if left alone business will permanently damage the environment, the economy and the political system in order to gain a short-term advantage.

"We in Gulf have no greater challenge," he stressed, "than to demonstrate convincingly that we are in the game for the long-term and that the public, as well as our shareholders, benefits from our efforts."

McAfee discussed Gulf's efforts to "keep our shareholders, customers, dealers, employees, annuitants and other interested audiences fully informed about our philosophies and activities," including the communications of the company's views on an effective energy policy for the United States.

Such a policy should include conservation, realistic prices, accelerated development of conventional oil and gas resources, a shift to coal and nuclear energy and the development of technology for other energy resources, the Gulf chairman said.

McAfee made it clear that in supporting a national energy policy, Gulf is not surrendering its right to "speak out against specific energy proposals which we believe would retard energy development...but our response will be reasoned and our criticism constructive."

Whatever the conservation measures adopted in the U.S., demand for energy will continue to grow, McAfee observed. "Perhaps the form of that energy will change, but the companies that can adapt to new energy sources will be the ones which will be able to continue their contributions to the nation's welfare. That is one of the reasons why we at Gulf will continue to oppose any attempts to dismember the energy industry," he said.

By continuing to apply its expertise to the energy needs of the world, "in the highly ethical, highly visible manner we have outlined, and on an environmentally acceptable basis, we will coninue to merit the public support necessary to prosper," McAfee concluded.

Some small businesses turn to Rolla for management

ROLLA — Lemay Plastics is a company in St. Louis that makes injected plastic parts. At times, some of its machines and workers are idle because orders for parts made by that equipment are all filled. The same equipment, with only slight modification, could be used to manufacture flower pots. But is the market for plastic flower pots worth the investment of time, materials and effort?

An engineer in Sullivan has invented and obtained patents on a specific piece of equipment anda process which could be of value in the construction industry. How much financing and what kind of marketing techniques would be necessary to start his own business to make the equipment?

A printing company in West Plains recently moved into a new and larger building in a new location and purchased some new equipment. After the move, they seemed to be developing unexpected difficulties. What can they do?

R. and R. Enterprises in St. Louis has problems with parts dipped in a new chemical formula. Can something be added or procedures changed in order to eliminate so much handwork in cleaning and removing rust after the parts are processed?

Small businesses in Missouri very often have such technical and management problems, but have limited resources to hire consultants or expert advice. One of the places to which they are beginning to turn for such assistance is the engineering management department at the University of Missouri-Rolla.

Engineering management is a relatively new field in education. If offers students a basic technical education in any of several fields such as chemical engineering, civil engineering, electrical engineering, mechanical engineering, metallurgical engineering, etc. In addition, students add a program of training in management areas such as financial management, marketing, production and personnel management.

At the beginning of its 10th year of existence, the engineering management department at UMR is a leader among the almost 40 similar departments established at colleges and universities throughout the United States. More than 525 students have obtained Bachelor of Science degrees in the field. And more than 800 have earned Master of Science degrees, both on the Rolla campus and through off-campus programs offered by UMR in St. Louis, Springfield, Jefferson City and Fort Leonard Wood.

In addition to supplying well-trained graduates for Missouri businesses, the department has recently instituted programs of consultation assistance for smaller concerns. Bernard R. Sarchet, chairman of the department since it was formed, explains why and how the department is becoming involved directly with businesses in Missouri.

"The basic purpose of this state supported educational institution is to meet the needs of the state in terms of education and service," Professor Sarchet says. "During the past nine years, we have assembled a faculty of 17 individuals with a wide variety of degree backgrounds in technology, science and business. In addition, nearly all of these professors have experience in industry. They average 10 years of university teaching experience as well as 10 years of industrial experience.

"We feel this expertise is useful not only in teaching and advising the students in their academic programs," he continues, "but it can also be applied -- to a limited extent -- in direct service to individual companies within the state. The service programs not only take advantageof knowledge of the faculty, but also prove to be a valuable educational tool for students who become involved in working on specific business problems."

Financial assistance to support the service programs is currently supplied from three sources -- USDA Cooperative Extension funds, a grant from the Economic Development Act that covers expenses of faculty members who consult with individual businesses and a grant from the Small Business Administration that supports work done with the small businesses by teams of faculty and students.

How does it work? In the case of Lemay Plastics, a team of students conducted a market survey for the company. They found there is a market for various standard sizes of low-cost plastic flower pots, with a resistance to cracking, that will last for at least two years. Large, clean drain holes and the colors white and green are also desirable. The market, the team found, is relatively constant all year long and the largest demand is in Florida and California. With this information, Lemay Plastics has decided it will be worth making the pots, both from a product profit standpoint and to keep their machines and personnel active.

A faculty member, working with the engineer who is trying to decide if he can start his own manufacturing company, is pointing out all the areas to be investigated and sources of information to be explored in order to have a broad enough base to make the final decision. Once the information is gathered, assistance will also be available in the evaluation process.

Several teams of students, directed by a faculty member with many years of business experience, are working with the printing company. Priorities have been established -- first of all -- to improve accounting procedures, then production procedures and, lastly, develop programs to increase sales.

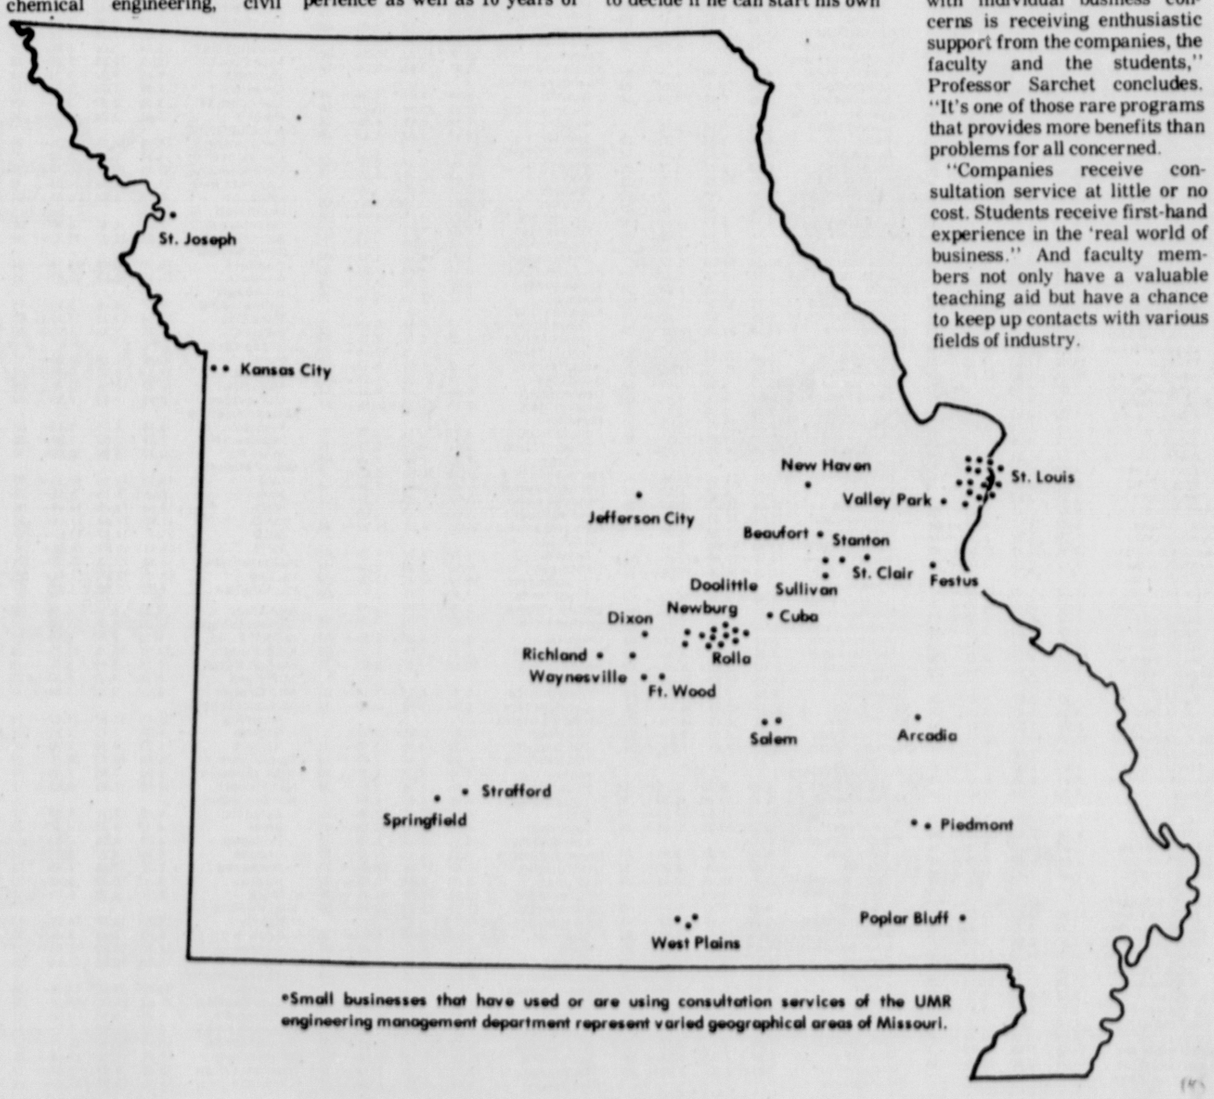

R. and R. Enterprises' problem has received primarily technical assistance. Initial recommendations to increase the temperature of the chemical bath were made by a faculty member. A series of laboratory tests using chemicals supplied by the company were made in a campus laboratory. Resultant recommendations have increased the volume of parts processed and decreased the final hand work necessary.

These are just a few of the examples of work done on approximately 70 projects with some 50 companies during the past two years. Most of the 17-member faculty and about 125 students have been involved in one or more of the projects.

Requests for assistance by companies faced with meeting state and federal regulations in the fields of safety, environmental pollution and energy are becoming more frequent. Proposals asking financial assistance for consultation work in these areas are being processed by the department.

"So far the work we are doing with individual business concerns is receiving enthusiastic support from the companies, the faculty and the students," Professor Sarchet concludes. "It's one of those rare programs that provides more benefits than problems for all concerned.

"Companies receive consultation service at little or no cost. Students receive first-hand experience in the 'real world of business.'" And faculty members not only have a valuable teaching aid but have a chance to keep up contacts with various fields of industry.

•Small businesses that have used or are using consultation services of the UMR engineering management department represent varied geographical areas of Missouri.

Plant operations remain unchanged

DEXTER -- Valmac Industries Inc., Memphis, expects to complete the purchase of four broiler chicken complexes from Swift Dairy and Poultry Company by the end of May.

Included in the purchase is the Dexter chicken processing plant, a fixture here since 1938.

Valmac, a large chicken wholesaling firm, didn't disclose terms in its letter of intent to purchase, but did cite the proposed service as a "natural extension of our business" in the Arkansas-Missouri-Oklahoma area.

Included in the purchase are broiler complexes in Bloomer and Clarksville, Ark., Muskegon, Okla., and Dexter. In addition, the purchase will include associated hatchery and supporting facilities.

The Dexter plant, which processes more than 25,000 chickens daily, employs some 70 persons and has been in Dexter under the Swift's name since 1938. The plant is located on East Stoddard Street.

While the number of chickens processed daily at the Dexter plant may vary according to market conditions, the number of chickens processed averages 3,240 a hour -- seven to eight hours a day, five days a week.

The local plant manager is Jerry Arnholt and James Hoksch is the plant superintendent.

Company sources in Memphis indicated this morning that "no changes are planned for the time being," and that plans call for continuation of the Dexter operation.

Full details, however, have been hard to come by, as the complicated and lengthy purchase agreements are worked out. Full and final purchase is not expected before the end of May, and it will be some time after that date before complete plans for all the plants are worked out.

Valmac Industries Inc. operates three divisions -- fiber, real estate and foods. The foods division, which is involved in the Dexter purchase, is "probably the third largest poultry operation in the United States," a company spokesman said today.

Consumer hotline announced

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (April 11, 1977) – A toll-free telephone line consumers may use to call the Public Service Commission was announced recently by the Missouri Public Service Commission.

The Consumer Hotline number is (800) 392-4211. It is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday, except on state holidays.

"This Consumer Hotline will allow anyone in outstate Missouri to easily get in touch with the Commission, and without making a toll call," said James P. Mulvaney, Chairman of the Public Service Commission.

Persons in the St. Louis and Kansas City metropolitan area should call the Commission's Consumer Services Offices in those cities instead of the Hotline number.

The telephone number of the St. Louis office is 367-5234. The address is 4625 Lindell, Room 219.

The telephone number of the Kansas City office is 274-6816. The address is 615 East 13th Street, Room G-33, Missouri State Office Building.

If a customer would have to make a toll call to reach the St. Louis or Kansas City offices, he should call the Consumer Hotline number.

Chairman Mulvaney said that people who have complaints or questions should first contact the local office of the utility company.

"The customer should give the company a chance to take care of the problem first," he said. "Then, if he is not satisfied, the customer should let us know about it."

"We can not guarantee that we will solve a problem to the customer's satisfaction, but we will do our best to take care of it."

The state of Minnesota's motto is in French, "L'Etoile du Nord", and means "Star of the North".

McElrath to join real estate firm

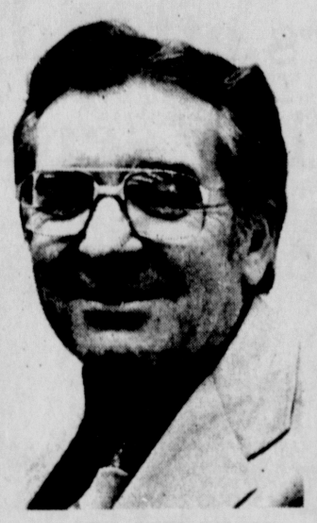

EAST PRAIRIE – Gerald W. McElrath, former superintendent of the R-2 School District, will join the firm of E. Paul Jackson and Associates, Realtors, as a full-time associate effective July 1, according to an announcement made this week by Jackson and McElrath.

McElrath announced his resignation April 14 to be effective June 30, the close of the present school year. He has held the position of superintendent four years and preciously was a school administrator at Gideon seven years and at Dexter 13 years. He taught at Dexter two years before going into administration.

His temporary real estate office will be in his home at 203 Lombardy Drive, where he will be working after school hours until his resignation is effective.

McElrath, who will be in charge of the firm's East Prairie office when the location is announced, has previously experience in the real estate field having been associated with Associated Realty in Cape Girardeau before moving to East Prairie.

A native of Dexter, McElrath received his A.B. degree from Olivet Nazarene College at Kankakee, Ill. and his masters degree from George Peabody

Gerald McElrath

College at Nashville, Tenn. He received his education specialist certificate from Soputheast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau and has done additional graduate work at Missouri University.

He and his wife, Iris Swank McElrath of Charleston, are the parents of two children. Mrs. McElrath is a teacher in the R-2 District and they are members of the First Church of God, where he is on the board of deacons.

Rule adopted limits party line service

JEFFERSON CITY, Telephone companies in Missouri will be prohibited from serving more than four customers per line by the end of 1980 under a rule the Public Service Commission adopted.

The rule applies to all companies except Continental Telephone. The Commission ordered Continental last fall to eliminate more than four-party service by the end of 1981.

The Public Service Commission first proposed the upgrading for all companies last year, noting that a significant portion of telephone complaints it receives are about eight and ten-party service.

James P. Mulvaney, Chairman of the Commission, said the new rule will improve service for telephone customers and should reduce complaints.

"There are about 3.2 million telephone customers in Missouri," he said, "and only about 38,000 still have multi-party service. Most of the eight and ten-party systems are 30 to 40 years old, and the Commission believes it is time to eliminate them.

"We are allowing the companies several years to phase out the multi-party service because of the expense involved. The cost ranges from $500 to $2,000 per customer depending on such things as roughness of terrain and the number of customers per mile of line."

Most companies, he said, have told the Commission they will be able to convert their systems by the deadline. The Commission may grant extensions in instances where unusual circumstances will require a longer period for conversion.

Continental Telephone was granted a longer period because it has 15,000 multi-party customers. It plans to upgrade 62 exchanges by the end of 2980, and complete upgrading in the remaining eight exchanges by the end of 1981.

General Telephone has about 6,000 multi-partyy customers, Southwestern Bell has about 3,000 and United Telephone has about 2,800. The other companies each have about 1,500 or less.

Thomas Jefferson's father, Peter, was a civil engineer of Welsh descent.

Mi-Lady's names new beauticians

Viloletta Reed, owner of Mi-Lady's Boutique in the Kingsway Shops, announces the hiring of two new beauticians for work at the boutique.

Shirley Luber, 217 Lake St., has been a licensed beautician for seven years. She and her husband, William, have one daughter.

Another beautician, Martha Stanberry, is the wife of James Stanberry and a mother of four. She and her husband live in Morehouse.

The two joined the staff at Mi-Lady's Boutique two weeks ago and will be giving hair cuts, styling jobs, manicures and facials.

Long range trading forecasts depressed

By CROCKETT SCOTT

Heavier volume during recent upside markets encourage more optimistic forecasts by SEC registered technicians.

Their long range forecasts, however, are not so rosy in a great many instances, as we have advanced more than 24 months into the recovery cycle. In this interval, note the technicians, productivity gains have flattened out perceptively since the curve started upward.

In a word or two "this is a tired old recovery cycle." So watch out. If you buy equity now, be ready to move out quickly. Ask this question: "Who are you going to sell your shares too at a higher price?"

Many of the astute have taken predidits long since. Not that stocks may not rise visibly in coming days. They probably will. But, note the technicians one should look for individual stand-out situations; not buy indiscriminately on the hope that the averages will pull individual equity shares into the capital gain area.

The time to buy equity is when unemployment is at its height, counsel SEC registered equity analysts; for then industry gets more hours of productivity per capata. As more and more of the unemployeed go back on the payrolls, expenses rise; profits slim down; there is more pressure on stockholders to move out and buy bonds.

Thus the analysts have lots of doubt about continuing strength in the economy particularly in view of the rising pace of inflation.

The severe winter also contributed to a deceleration in the rise of profits, it is noted.

On the subject of profits, Argus Research Corp. makes the following observation in its weekly staff report of April 11. "Among non-financial corporation industry groups, there is a wide variation in profits performance--much of which reflects the differential impact of the January-February freeze and the associated shortage of natural gas. Some industries, however, have a strong regular seasonal pattern in sales and profits, and this will, of course significantly affect quarterly comparisions in several categories. ""For example, the large first-quarter decline in retailing profits (61.4 per cent) as compared with the fourth quarter of 1976 was mainly attributable to the seasonal (Christmas-related) rise in sales which occurs late each year, although bad weather obviously had an adverse effect on the comparison. On a year to year basis, the retail trade sector apparently scored one of the biggest gains in net income (34.6 per cent) of any major industry group. "However, the percentage gain in this instance has been substantially distorted by the performance of Sears, Roebuck's insurance subsidiary (technically Allstate ought not be included in this group), which greatly boosted total net income of the nine retail corporations included in this survey. Excluding Sears, first quarter after-tax earnings for this group were up by approximately 12 per cent from the year earlier level.

"Among the industry groups included in this Argus Survey, the steels suffered the biggest four-quarter profits decline (63.3 per cent) and the second largest drop (60.3 per cent) on a quarter to quarter to quarter basis (only retail trade was worse). Steel industry earnings were devastated net only by the cold weather and rising energy prices, but also by sluggish demand during last year's decelaration in economic activity, by the accompanying decline in capacity utilization which raised fixed costs per unit of output, and by tough import competition in product lines.

"First quarter net income for the ten paper and lumber products companies included in this survey registered a 32.6 per cent decline from the year earlier level, while falling by a lesser amount (9.7. per cent) from the prior quarter. This group was plagued by weak demand and excess capacity after last year's first quarter, which among other things, kept a lid on prices; in the 1977 first quarter, the freeze-up in construction activity temporarily reduced demand for lumber products.

"Earnings for the building industry fell 26.9 per cent quarter-to-quarter in the January-March period, reflecting the real (denstant dollar) drop in both residential and non-residential construction."

By contrast, notes, Argus, "the biggest increase in net income on a quarter to quarter basis was achieved by the natural gas utilities (36.5 per cent).

Runyan looking for honeymoon between President and farmers

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A farm-oriented national administration led by a farmer—Jimmy Carter—could put the farmer "back in the driver's seat," says state Agriculture Department Director Jack Runyan.

"If there's ever a time when a honeymoon could start, it'll start now," said Runyan, a St. Joseph cattleman who has become the state's chief agriculture official.

"And maybe we can get this thing worked out and we'll (farmers) get to make a living again."

Runyan wears the three-piece tweed of an administrator and the cowboy boots of an agribusinessman interchangeably. He says he has learned the job, which he has held for a little longer than 90 days, requires many skills, from public speaking to listening to the public.

Runyan displayed the unabashed candid manner that has made him a refreshing member of Gov. Joseph Teasdale's cabinet in an interview from his office overlooking some of the fertile farmland on the banks of the Missoouri River here.

In a recent cabinet meeting, Runyan treated his colleagues to his unpredictable manner when he noted that cattle manure which finds its way into state lakes and streams is called "pollution," but when "a thousand geese fly over a pond for 15 minutes it's called conservation."

The "city-farm syndrome" Runyan blames with fostering distrust and misunderstanding between farmers and city-dwellers.

"All agriculture is weak on consumer relations," he noted. "GM (General Motors) raises its prices five per cent every year, but when the farmer raises prices, everybody gets upset. Food is being paid for with cash out of your pocket, where other products are often being paid for by credit cards and checks.

"People are apathetic about rising prices, but when you get back to food they scream."

Runyan is planning to offer a media-moderated panel of mayors, agriculture officials and farmers to help the citizens of Missouri, which has the extremes of high population concentration in St. Louis and Kansas City and low concentration is outstate areas. Missouri's production reflects that diversity; agriculture is the No. 1 producer and automobile manufacturing is No. 2.

"Nature's been good to us," Runyan says, philosophizing on the agriculture industry in this country. "The day we got here, we began overproducing. Sometime it's going to have to quit."

But no matter what Runyan does as the state's chief farm man, he can do little to avert the wrath of the weather. Weather has the power to bring the farmer into disrepute with urban Missourians, he believes.

Runyan's early monthhs on the job coincided with the state's worst winter in years, and the beginning of the fourth consecutive year of drought.

If the drought continues, Runyan says, it will be bad for the farmer and cattleman's public image. Continued liquidation of cattle stocks or crops because of the drought will depress prices even further so that "when raindfall hits, boom ... she'll go up," Runayn said. "It will be too rapid a rise in prices. I don't want to see it that way, but I can't change that."

And public outcry over skyrocketing prices will follow quickly, Runyan predicts. "Then, we'll have consumer resistance."

Good managers with a good pencil are going to survive it, he said. "But the people out on a limb are the city farmers who found themselves with 50 cattle and no feed."

Part of the answer to Missouri's overproduction of cattle may be in defining markets for beef abroad. Runyan is arranging trade shows in several countries to ferret out markets for Missouri beef. Beef exporting from Missouri is a market Runyan says is "virtually unexplored."

The drought coupled with dour economic conditions for the farmer have transformed farming and the farmer, Runyan believes.

"Today's farmer isn't the bib-overalled, seedy, corncob pipe smoking man who went to look at the vegetables on Saturday," Runyan said. "Industry has made agriculture mature. You really have to be a businessman to survive it today."

Education still isn't a necessity for the farmer, he added, but there are becoming more and more college-educated farmers. "It's going to be a businessman's world and that's it."

Local loan officers attend recent agricultural banking seminar

Local loan officers attended an Agricultural Banking Seminar Tuesday, at the Southeast Missouri State University Student Union Building in Cape Girardeau.

The seminar was sponsored by the University of Missouri Department of Agricultural Economics and the University of Missouri Extension Area Farm Management Specialists.

Principal speakers included Tom Brown and Norlin Hein, University of Missouri Department of Economics, Columbia and Myron Bennett, Missouri Mail-In Farm Record Program, Columbia. Local area farm management specialists participating were Richard McIntosh, Joe Patke, John Yount, Clair Engle, Kem Kennedy and Bob Montgomery.

A highlight of the session was Myron Bennett's comments on how a farmer can pay for land at the current land prices. "Why the land boom? Everybody but everybody expects land prices to continue up", stated Bennett. "Most people depend on grain prices going up, inflation to continue, and if things get bad the government will not let farmers go through the wringer again." He said one other factor is there is a limited amount of land, however farmers can't pay for land at current prices with the land financed at 100 per cent.

"A whale of a lot of land is coming into the row crop production for 1977", stated Tom Brown as he explained troubleshooting the farm business. "A big corn crop is being planted, which is as big or bigger than last year. This along with the present cattle prices will put pressure on net farm earnings and 1977 will net the farmer less money", stated Brown. "The cost to produce beef is 49 cents per poound and currently farmers are being paid 37 cents per pound," stated Joe Patke Area Farm Specialist. Brown believes hogs will continue on a downward trend profit wise. "Looking back, 1973 was the top year for farmers," stated Brown "and in projecting 1977 the farmer will not be doing any better than he did in the late sixties--this is caused by inflation." Also, he stated land values have doubled in the last five years.

"To break even on corn production, a farmer must receive $2.69 per bushel", according to Richard McIntosh. The above figure was based on the average state yield of 67 bushels per acre. Local farmers can presently book new crop for fall delivery at $2.37. McIntosh's data indicated Bootheel farmers break even price on soybeans is $4.34 per bushel, based on 30 bushel yield and wheat breakeven is $2.94, based on 43 bushels per acre. Current booking price for soybeans is $7.42 for January 1, 1978 and current wheat booking price is $2.33 per bushel.

Norlin Hein told the credit officers, "The average farmer paid $15,689.00 for new equipment in 1976. The farmer has approximately $79.423 per acre invested in equipment and his annual depreciation runs $16.27 per acre invested in equipment and his annual depreciation runs $16.27 per acre." Hein gave the group data showing that a farmer has to invest about $20.00 per acre farmed for tractors, $16.23 per acre for combines and $19.00 per acre for irrigation. He said farmers could figure on it taking a 100 horsepower tractor for every 300 acres farmed.

Local loan officers attending were Ken Williams, Sikeston PCA; John Harper, First National Bank; George Camp, Bank of Sikeston; Hal Robertson, Land Bank, all of Sikeston, Frances Puckett and Charles Palmer, both of New Madrid and Don Niederkorn, Bloomfield.

Medina tests favorable says U of M agronomist

"It seems to me there must be something to Medina or I wouldn't even be getting an indication of increase," says Jim Roth, Agronomist in charge of the soil fertility testing at the University of Missouri, Portageville Station.

For the past three years Roth has conducted tests on five crops using Medina in combination with a good fertilizer program. Numerous rates and times of applications were studied starting with the Medina Company's recommendation of one gallon per acre pre-plant or one gallon foliar application. While these generally boosted yields to show an upward trend, the most successful was one half gallon pre-plant and then 1 gallon of Medina as foliar application at first blooms on cotton or soybeans and at the six to seven weeks age on corn and grain sorghum.

On cotton the one half gallon pre or at planting in a band plus one gallon foliar application increased cotton lint yields from 29 pounds to 186 pounds per acre for a three years average on three different soil types of 101 pounds per acre. At 60 cents cotton this is worth $60.60 per acre. The cost of one and one half gallons of Medina would be less than $11.00. Most cotton producers should realize more than 60 cents on their cotton crop this year.

In the three grain sorghum studies, all three methods of application were profitable where one half gallon pre-plant and one half gallon foliar spray was made, the yield was increased 722 pounds per acre over the checks. The checks averaged 4,983 and Medina 5,705. At $4.00 per cwt. this equals $28.88 an acre more for Medina. The one gallon preplant increased yields by 640 pounds per acre. 5,057 for the check and 5,697 for Medina. The one gallon foliar spray increase the most, 847 pounds per acre. The check produced 5,550 pounds per acre and Medina 6,387 pounds at $4.00 for cwt. this was worth $33.88 an acre and the cost of Medina was less than $8.00 per acre for a $4.00 to $1.00 return.

In soybeans last year Roth determined a significant increase for soybeans from 1 gallon foliar applied material over the check plots. Yields increased from 27.6 to 32.1 bushels per acre.

Wheat in 1975 was increased statistically significant at the 5 per cent level of probability (this means it would have returned a good profit).

Roth is not the first researcher to report favorable about Medina. Dr. Elton Cook, who for 25 years was Agronomist at Texas A & M's Blackland Station, reported Medina increased cotton yields by 129 pounds per acre over a 4 year period of replicated test on this Station. In every year the increase was significant statistically at the 5 per cent level. Texas A & M released the data at the Field Days, but never officially reported it from the University. A good question is, why not?

Cook is now Chairman of the Agriculture Department at Lubbock Christian College, his work on cotton and grain sorghum at Lubbock where they have a 700 acre Research Station has continued to show very favorable results from Medina.

On grain sorghum the checks averaghed 4,980 per acre, one gallon of Medina per acre increased the yield to 6,540 or $62,40 an acre more at $4.00 per cwt. Where fertilizer 60-30-0 was added to Medina the yeild went up to 7,193 per acre or $88.52 above the check. Fertilizer 60-30-0 yielded 6,720 pounds per acre without Medina. The Medina Company recommends a good fertility program be used with Medina.

Typical of five years of cotton test at Lubbock the one gallon Medina soil applied, increased the yield by an average of 154 pounds of lint per acre, at 60 cents per pound this would be worth $92.40 an acre more. The one gallon foliar spray at first bloom increased the yield by 147 pounds per acre or $88.20. No tests were conducted at the one half gallon preplant and one gallon foliar spray. If you can't believe Lubbock Christian College reports, then who can you believe?

University of Southern Illinois Commercial Farm Commercial Farm Manager, Elden Shaffner tested Medina on one half of 220 acres treating eight rows of corn and not appling Medina to eight rows. Results were 12.99 bushels per acre more where Medina was used with liquid fertilizer pre-plant. At $2.75 a bushel the increase on 110 acres of Medina corn was worth $3,159.20 or $28.72 an acre "having had only one years experience with Medina and observing its effect on increased corn yields, I'm looking forward to using it again in 1977" says Shaffner. Shaffner's field testing is more like a farmer should test a product.

If all this sounds good to you as a farmer, then we have some judicious advise from Dr. Keltin Anderson from Mississippi State University. He advocates the same process as does the Medina Company. "Try it-then again. If over a period of three years you get substantial benefits from the material under your own situation, then use it. In effect, you are doing what researchers must do-prove the validity of a product over a serioes of seasons, under different conditions, using replicated tests and, preferrably, statistical checks."

Most farmers would not need a statistical anaylsis to learn of a products merits. All most want to know is how much more was I able to go with to the Bank. It seems likely that Medina can help you do that.

Pesticide exams by appointment only

JEFFERSON CITY - Future examinations for commercial pesticide applicators, public operators and pesticide dealers in Missouri will be given in Jefferson City by appointment only. The exams are required by the Missouri Pesticide Act of 1974, which went into effect Oct. 21, 1976.

Applications for the exams may be obtained from the Bureau of Pesticide Control, Missouri Department of Agriculture. Licenses will be issued following successful completion of the tests.

A commercial applicator license is required by persons who apply any pesticide for a fee or compensation. A public operator license is required by employees of federal, state or local government agencies who apply restricted use pesticides as part of their jobs. Persons who distribute, sell, offer or hold for sale restricted use pesticides must have a pesticide dealer license.

Persons who are both pesticide dealers and commercial applicators must have a commercial applicator license to legally apply any pesticide commercially. However, their dealer license will not be required until the Environmental Protection Agency designates which pesticides will be labeled for restricted use.

About 5,000 persons have taken the exams since they were begun last year in February. So far the tests have been given 54 times in 22 locations throughout the state.

Training manuals for the various exams are available for a small fee from Extension Publications, 211 Whitten Hall, University of Missouri, Columbia. Mo. 65201. Order forms for the manuals are available at local extension centers throughout the state or the Bureau of Pesticide Control, Missouri Department of Agriculture, Box 630, Jefferson City, Mo. 65101.

Brownfield says marketing the key to farming success

Derry Brownfield, popular radio agriculture newscaster was the guest speaker at the Southeast Missouri State University Agriculture Club Banquet. The banquet was held April 15, at the Student Union Building on the Southeast Missouri State University campus at Cape Girardeau.

Brownfield told the Ag club members, university faculty and guests that the $10 beans farmers could get if they had any beans, is a cheap price. He reminded the club that beans had been as high has $12 before. He told the club that it is all a matter of economics and that we, meaning everyone, have convinced everybody that the current supply of beans is very short. He went on to speculate that farmers will plant a lot of beans and then everybody will convince everybody there is an over supply of beans and the price will come way down again. Brownfield did not predict how high beans will go, but he asked this question, "What would you think the cost of milk would be if all dairy farmers stopped milking cows in the morning and the federal government hired George Meany's labor union people to go out and milk the cows and do the farm work? No doubt, you would find the cost of milk today as being cheap in comparison to what George Meany would charge you."

Brownfield encouraged young people to start farming. "People say young people can't get started in farming--that is hog wash." He said it is up to the individual as to how to make a go of it. He said young farmers have been taught to produce and produce and produce and then they sit back and look at what they have produced and don't know how to market it. He is convinced nobody is going to out produce the American farmer, but the farmer is going to have to learn how to market his products, even if he has to organize like doctors and dentist.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some farm-state congressmen aren't completely happy with the increases in President Carter's price-support proposals, but they feel he is finally talking their language.

Iowa Rep. Tom Harkin, a Democrat, said Tuesday he would like even higher levels than what Carter is recommending.

Kansas Republican Sen. Bob Dole said the new Carter proposals are "certainly a step in the right direction," but added that the administration is still "short of adequate price levels for 1978" and has proposed no adjustments for 1977.

One representative said the President "gave in to us cold turkey."

On the House Agriculture Committee, Washington Democrat Thomas D. Foley, the chairman, said the revised supports are "much more in the area of discussion" among committee members than the administration's first plan.

His Senate counterpart, Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga., made no comment Tuesday as he told his committee about the administration's change. He had handled the original recommendations on March 23 the same way, then later made clear his displeasure.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland told key congressmen of the administration's revision Tuesday, warning them not to try to push supports any higher or Carter may veto them.

The new recommendations, he said, are "dangerously close to the administration's spending limit." The President said his package could boost the total support payments from the current $935 million to about $2 billion.

The Senate panel, without having the specifics of the Carter package at hand,then approved a corn price support of $2.28, 28 cents above the President's proposal.

Under the price support program, the government aids farmers when the prices they receive for their crops fall below the support levels, often through a combination of abundant production and insufficient demand. Such conditions now exist only for wheat and rice.

Deputy Agriculture Secretary John White said he found the congressional reaction "generally good.... They're in a bind, but they know that this (the new proposal) is about the limit of what we can get passed" in an urban-dominated legislature.

Bergland said Tuesday it was apparent to the President that his original proposal did not have enough support in Congress to pass.

The secretary said the President's change of heart would allow 1978 support prices of $2 a bushel for corn, up from the original $1.75; $2.90 for wheat, up from $2.60; $7.20 per 100 pounds for rice, up from $6.75, and 50 cents a pound for cotton, up from 47.5 cents.

The 1977 targets are $1.70 for corn, $2.47 for wheat, $8.40 for rice and 47.8 cents for cotton.

Soybean fertilizing important this year

By Thomas A. Brown, Jr.
Area Agronomy Specialist

The application of lime and fertilizer according to soil needs as determined by a soil test will be extremely important for soybeans this season. The current price outlook for soybeans is good; therefore, it will behoove farmers to strive for the highest yield that it is practical to produce.

Fertilizer is important for soybeans as well as other crops. A 50 bushel yield of beans removes 40 pounds of phosphate and 70 pounds of potash compared to 50 pounds of phosphate and 35 pounds of potash removed from the soil by a 150 bushel yield of corn. As this indicates, lots of plant food is removed from the soil by this crop, and bean yields as well as yields of other crops are low on many Stoddard County fields because beans have been produced so long with the application of little or no fertilizer.

Beans will respond very well to direct application of fertilizer on many fields in this area. For example, soybean yields were increased an average of six bushels per acre from the applicationo of 60 pounds of potash per acre on 19 Southeast Missouri fields testing 150 pounds of potash or lower. Likewise, bean yields were increased an average of three bushels per acre from the application of 60 pounds of phosphate per acre on eight fields in this area testing 100 pounds of phosphate or lower. Many fields in Stoddard County test below these levels of phosphate and potash.

Since the soybean is a legume, lime is necessary to the production of profitable yields of this crop. Lime not only adds plant nutrients to the soil which are important to soybean production, but it corrects the soil acidity which maximizes the effectiveness of phosphate, potash, and other plant food elements necessary to the successful production of soybeans. This has been clearly demonstrated by both research and actual farm experience in this area. For example, results of a test plot conducted in the area showed that a soil treatment of 30 pounds of phosphate and 60 pounds of potash plus 3.5 tons of lime per acre increased bean yields 19 bushels per acre compared to a yield increase of 15 bushels per acre produced where the same fertilizer treatment was applied with no lime. If needed, lime should be applied before other fertility needs are considered.

The application of needed lime and fertilizer is necessary if highyield production of soybeans is to be accomplished. A soil test to guide their application is essential if maximum results from money invested in fertilizer and lime are to be realized. At least two to three weeks will be required for the farmer to receive his fertilizer and lime recommendations after he brings his soil samples to the University of Missouri Extension Center for testing. Consequently, farmers who do not have a recent soil test from all soybean fields should submit their samples for testing as soon as possible.

Drainage and flood control may be helped by water shed project

By CHARLES EDDY
District Conservationist
Soil Conservation Service

A few week's ago many of the communities in southeast Missouri were flooded to some extent due to heavy rains. And the ones that didn't flood had some drainage problems.

One way that the Mississippi County Soil and Water Conservation District is trying to solve their drainage and flood problems is with the Mississippi County Spillway Area Watershed Project.

Watershed projects are carried out by the U.S.D.A. Soil Conservation Service under authority of Public Law 566. Under Public Law 566 Congress can appropriate funds to units of Governments, such as Soil and Water Conservation Districts or Drainage Districts, to be used for flood control and dramage projects in small watersheds.

In July 1967 a group of interested citizens in Mississippi County made an application to the Governor of Missouri that the Spillway Area of Mississippi County be considered for planning and construction of drainage improvements and flood control measures. This application for planning was approved in 1971. As you know the Sillway Area is that area between the main levee and the setback levee and it extends from Bird's Point to New Madrid. This areahasbeen used as a Spillway for the Mississippi River only once and that was in the flood of 1973.

At the present time all the runoff from the Mississippi County Spillway Area drains through New Madrid County and into the river at New Madrid.

Early in the planning process the Corp of Engineers made it known to the Soil Conservation Serivce that they would like to co-ordinate planning and that they would like to close the gap in the levee at New Madrid to prevent backwater flooding and they proposed outlets through the levee and pumping plants to pump rainwater over the levee during periods of high river stages. The plan now is for the Corp of Engineers to build outlets and pumping plants at New Madrid and near Dorena. The Soil Conservation Service will construct improved multi-purpose channels and wildlife improvement area.

The wildlife areas will consist of fishing and access to the larger drainageways and a 2,600 acre wildlife area surrounding the Ten Mile Pond area.

The Spillway Area is presently governed by the Drainage District No. 1 Board. At the present time a Water Quality Study is being conducted as part of the environmental assessment of the project.

Projects of this type take a long time to get started but with any luck we should see some results in the not too distant future.

Any questions concerning this project should be directed to the Soil Conservation Service at Highway 105 South, in Charleston, Mo.

Pan American Day

Pan American Day is observed on April 14 to commemorate the First International Conference of American States, held on that date in 1890 in Washington, D.C. The Conference adopted a resolution which resulted in the creation of the hemispheric organization known today as the Pan American Union, with headquarters in Washington.

Farm Roundup

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of cattle and calves being fattened in feedlots for slaughter as of April 1 totals slightly more than 10.6 million head in 23 states surveyed quarterly by the Agriculture Department.

Officials said Tuesday that although the April 1 inventory was down 3 per cent from a year ago it was up 25 per cent from the same date in 1975.

Further, the report said that during the first quarter of this year sales of cattle to packing plants rose 2 per cent from a year ago to more than 6.4 million head.

The report said placement of new cattle in feedlots during January-March rose to nearly 5.6 million head, a 3 per cent gain from the first quarter of last year.

Thus, USDA said feedlot operators intend to market more cattle this spring, an estimated six million head or about 1 per cent more than in the second quarter last year.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., says any plan by the Carter administration to enter commodity agreements with foreign countries to carry out price control will be in for trouble.

"I believe strongly that we should avoid involving the United States in commodity agreements with maximum and minimum price provisions, or other provisions aimed at price and market stability," Dole said Tuesday.

Dole, the ranking Republican on the Senate Agriculture Committee, made his comments at a meeting of farm magazine editors. He said past experience has shown such agreements produce "disruption of markets and long-term harm" to both farmers and consumers.

For example, he said the most recent International Grains Agreement with maximum and minimum prices was "an international economic disaster," particularly to U.S. wheat growers.

"It proved to be lower price insurance and a strategy for losing markets," Dole said. "Other countries undersold us. We were left 'holding the bag' — a bag full of unexported wheat."

Dole referred to an agreement he said was signed by the late President Lyndon B. Johnson, who thought it would provide new price insurance to American wheat farmers.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senior Carter administration farm official says that if a high allowance for land costs is included in new price supports for wheat, corn and other crops it could trigger a surge of foreign investment in U.S. farmland, including Middle East oil money.

Some in Congress want new farm legislation to include full costs of producing the nation's food and fiber. For example, as land prices increase so would government guarantees to farmers.

Howard W. Hjort, the Agriculture Department's director of economics, says full-cost protection would make land so attractive to outside investors that the family-owned and operated farm would be in serious jeopardy.

"The full cost of production concept, according to USDA studies, would have a roughly 9 per cent return to land allowance, based on its current value," Hjort told reporters at a briefing last week.

If that happened, the government would be providing a guaranteed rate of return on land investment, which would trigger "a fair amount of bidding" for land as it became available for sale.

"They would bid that up as they have in recent years well above its economic value, and I'd guess that you would be assured of a 12 to 15 per cent rate of return on land, if the government would guarantee 9 per cent," Hjort said.

"I am also reasonably sure, from some previous experience, that there's a rather large pool of money that is circulating around in the world looking for a home," he said. "Some of it is OPEC (Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries) money, some of it European money."

Hjort has a background as an agricultural consultant overseas and in this country. He is a chief author of the Carter administration's farm bill, recently sent to Congress, which calls for lower price support guarantees — including land costs — than called for by similar proposals in the Senate and House.

Much of the prospective investment capital is in Europe where there is a "concern about reinvesting it in their own countries" and is simply waiting on opportunities for outside investment, Hjort said.

Until its promoters withdrew the plan recently, a land investment concept called Ag-Land Fund I stirred much opposition among farmers and in Congress. The idea called for using pension funds to invest in prime farmland, and supporters had applied for federal income tax exemption.

THE REAL SACCHARIN ISSUE

Most of the criticism, and much ridicule, of the Food and Drug Administration's proposed ban on saccharin has centered on the fact that a person would have to consume impossible amounts of the artificial sweetener to equal the doses fed to laboratory rats. Specifically, about 800 12-ounce cans of diet drink per day.

FDA and other scientists, however, have defended the Canadian tests, which led to the FDA's action, as having followed standard scientific methods. It is too expensive and time- consuming, they say, to feed multitudes of rats small quantities of a suspected cancer- causing substance over their lifetimes. Thus to accelerate the procedure, a small number are fed massive amounts.

If, for example, something causes cancer in one per cent of the laboratory animals, this could translate into a human rate of one in 100,000. Multiplied by 220 million people, that would be 2,200 new cancer cases.

This, they say, constitutes an unacceptable risk and fully warrants prohibitive action by a government agency charged with safeguarding the public health.

The ordinary person is not equipped to argue scientific method with the scientists, although he may be excused if this kind of thing sounds to him a little like conducting an automobile safety test by ramming 10 cars into a wall at 100 miles an hour to simulate 100 cars hitting it at 10 miles an hour.

But in the final analysis, laymen and scientists alike have to rely on common sense, and common sense seems to have been the chief casualty in the saccharin controversy.

Despite this and other tests, we really don't know if saccharin has ever caused cancer in anybody. It has been around for 70 years, and the rates of stomach and bladder cancer have been declining in recent years.

There are also the possible consequences to people who must have a substitute for sugar in their diets. An increase in heart attacks caused by overweight would seem to be a poor trade-off for a decrease in cancer deaths.

What it comes down to is just how far the government may reasonably go in protecting people from all the risks involved in daily living. There are any number of suspected cancer- causing agents that occur naturally in food, but no one — so far — has suggested we starve to death in order to avoid cancer.

The FDA built up an immense fund of gratitude and respect among the public in the thalidomide case a decade or so ago. Resisting all kinds of pressure, it steadfastly refused to okay the tranquilizer, which was later conclusively and dramatically proved to cause birth defects.

Unfortunately, it has pretty much depeted that fund with this saccharin business.

THE AMERICAN DREAM

WASHINGTON— I walked into my son's room as he was stretched out on his bed watching a basketball game on television.

"Son," I said, "I'd like to talk to you about the American dream."

"Yes, Dad."

"Remember when I told you a few years ago that someday you would have everything you ever wanted in life, thanks to the American dream?"

"Yes, Dad," he said, "and I've been counting on it ever since."

"Well, son, I just heard President Carter talk about energy on TV and he said no one can count on the American dream any more. It's a whole new ball game, and we're going to have to make sacrifices and give up many things that we've gotten used to."

"Why us, Dad?" my son asked.

"Because we're consumers, son. We're using up energy faster than it can be produced. We're slothful, wasteful people who haven't given a thought to the future."

"But we're Americans, Dad," he said.

"I know. It's hard to believe Americans would do anything bad, but it turns out even America is running out of fuel much faster than we ever dreamed we would. No one ever thought ti would happen to the good guys. Son, I don't know how to tell you this, but someday, when you become successful and achieve the wherewithal to enjoy the fruits of your labor, you will probably not be able to buy a large Cadillac."

My son bit his lip to keep from crying. "But you promised!" he cried.

"I know I promised you a Cadillac but it isn't my fault I can't deliver. This country, despite its power and greatness, can no longer afford the luxury of gas guzzlers that only get 12 miles to the gallon. You're goin to have to be satisfied with a small car which Detroit will have to make if we are to survive as a viable and free nation."

"How small?" he wanted to know.

"Very small," I told him. "But that isn't all. Someday you're going to get married and have a wife and children."

"I remember you telling me that," my son replied. "And you said that if I worked hard and married, well, I could have a heated swimming pool."

"Well, son, you can still have the children, but by then I doubt if you can install the heated swimming pool."

"Why would I want kids if I can't have a heated swimming pool?"

"They can swim in an unheated pool. It's actually not bad when you get used to it."

"The next thing you're going to tell me is that when I grow up there won't be electric golf carts and I'll have to walk the entire 18 holes."

"It could come to that," I admitted, "though the President didn't mention anything about electric golf carts. There is a certainty, though, that our homes will be colder in the winter and hotter in the summer. And you may have to give up electrical appliances such as can openers."

"You mean I'm going to have to open up cans manually?"

"It can be done," I assured him.

"What about my stereo set?" he demanded.

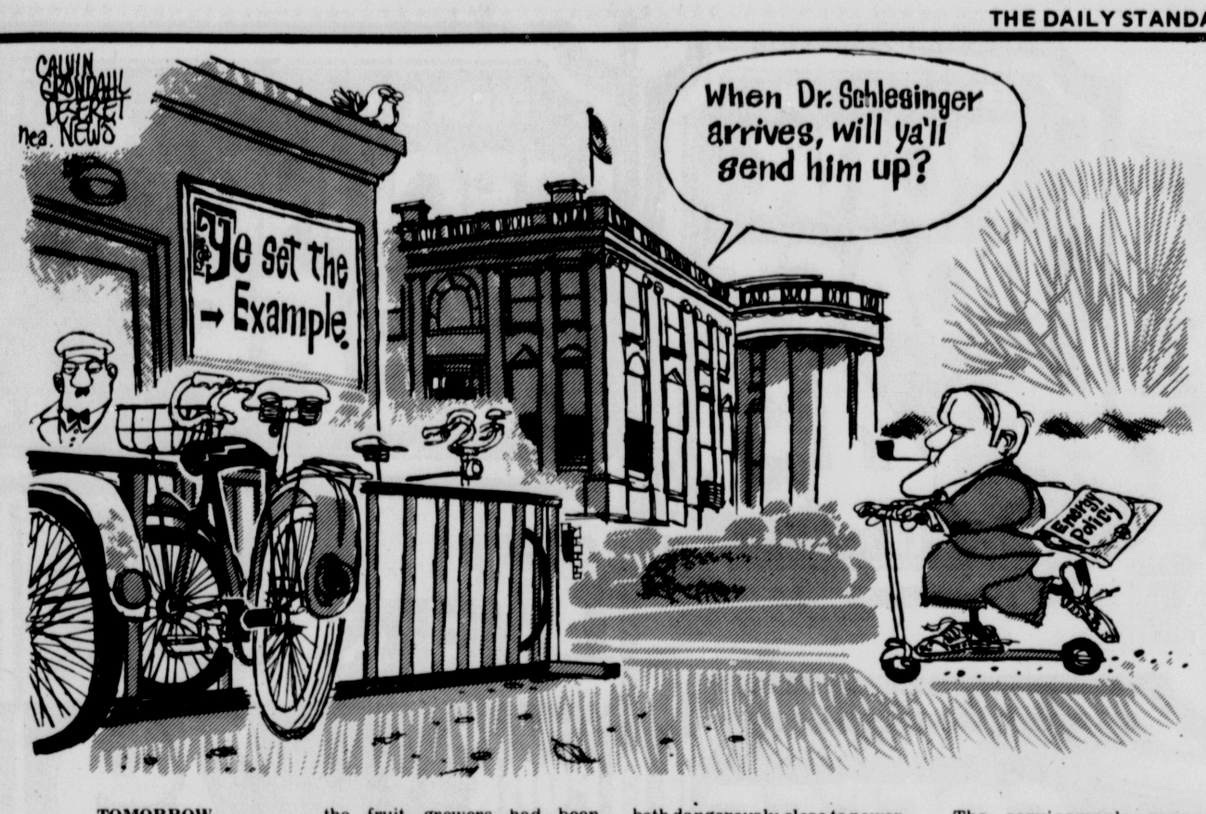

"You could be limited to four speakers."

"What kind of American dream is that when each person can have only four speakers?"

"It's not the America anyone has known in the past. But our survival depends on conservation, and whether anyone likes it or not we're going to have to give up the things we hold dearest to us -- like snowmobiles and lighted tennis courts and throwaway razors. God knows I've worked and scraped so you could have everything you wanted in life. But it just wasn't meant to be. Do you think any one of us ever imagined that someday our children would have to take a bus?"

"A bus!" he yelled.

"I was saving that for last."

NATION HAS DOUBTS

If Americans generally have a strong feeling of disbelief about the nation's supply of natural gas; and if many citizens feel that big gas companies are deliberately holding such supplies until they can get a better price, then that suspicion is understandable.

It would now seem that Americans have been told a variety of stories, all of which predicted acute shortages of certain goods and materials, only to have it revealed later that these stories were untrue, or at the least were exaggerated.

For instance, the current controversy over the Florida citrus crop.

When the major storm hit a few weeks ago, Americans were told that the crop had been hurt by at least 40 percent. There were stories of citrus growers being put out of business by the freeze. There were dire warnings that the price of such food would go up drastically because the fruit growers had been severely hurt.

It all sounded reasonable enough, and Americans, generally bought the story as true.

Now it seems that the total citrus crop will be somewhat greater — not less — than the previous year. Obviously, the story of the terrible loss had been manufactured.

The same now appears to be true with coffee. There were warnings of disaster — and these warnings were accompanied by drastic increases in the price of coffee.

Now there is growing evidence that this story, too, was, to say the least, greatly exaggerated.

So, with the energy shortage, Americans can be excused if they are a bit skeptical about a so-called shortage. And preliminary reports from the current invesitgation would seem to indicate that Americans have a right to their disbelief. There are at least strong indications that the stories of a gas shortage have been fabricated by the gas suppliers and owners of the wells. Investigators are finding that at least some of the owners have been holding back on the supply of gas, waiting for price increases.

Americans have been victimized enough. They can be excused for wondering.

The free enterprise system, which has worked so well, is now being abused, in these instances. This could lead to something far worse — government control. To avoid that, the system must clean its own house, and tell the truth to the American people. — Daily Statesman- Messenger (Dexter)

EUROPEAN COMMUNIT SUMMIT

From The Daily Telegraph, London

Euro-Communism put on in Madrid what should have been the biggest demonstration so far of its growing international strength, its most flamboyant challenge to the old European order it counts on replacing.

Signor Berlinguer and M. Marchais, leaders of the French and Italian Communist Parties, both dangerously close to power, went defiantly to Spain, where Communism is still taboo, to back up Comrade Carrillo in his demand for legitimation. Yet it all turned out to be rather a damp squib. Hopes were disappointed of trouble with the Spanish police, which gave all possible assistance in the arrangements for meetings and press conferences.

The trouble was that the three musketteers had, so to speak, different axes to grind. Senor Carrillo wanted not only the now customary dedications to external freedom, democracy and the plural political system, but also some fairly sharp reproofs to the Soviet Union on the subject of human rights. He attached special importance to the latter point because the Spanish courts, now deciding on whether the Communist Party can be admitted to legality and participation in the June elections, needs to be convinced that "it is not subject to an international discipline." M. Marchais, however, whose party has only recently and grudgingly emerged from its traditional hard line, would not stand for any harsh words against Moscow.

So the outcome was a strong declaration in support of political virtue and condemnation of political (violence), carefully generalized except with reference to Spain, where "Facist terrorism" was roundly slated. Voters in all European countries should take due note. If these Communist leaders want to convince intelligent people that they no longer look to Moscow as the shining example, they must start by denouncing Russia's grip on Eastern Europe and breaking off relations until it is ended.

The servicemen's prayer group of which I was a member was visiting aborigine churches in the central mountain region of Taiwan. This involved strenuous hiking over primitive trails. A young Navy lieutenant in the group who fancied himself a wit had been aiming a steady barrage of gibes at our huffing and puffing, middle-aged pastor. One afternoon, the lieutenant missed his footing on a narrow bridge and landed with a howl, spread-eagled on his back in knee-deep mud. The more he struggled, the more ensnared and muddy he became, much to the delight of all.

Finally, as the lieutenant threw up his arms in despair, our long-suffering pastor, with an expression of pure humility, looked heavenward and said, "Thank you, Lord. You can let him up now."

The roster posted by the women in the Air Force squandron, however, read: "Morton, 9; Onslow, 10" Upon inquiry, the WAF commander explained that the numbers represented not miles, but dress sizes to which the women hoped to slim down by bicycling.

GRANDMASTERS AREN'T PAWNS

From The Chicago Tribune

Chess has long been Russia's national pastime, and we've sometimes attributed the Kremlin's success in foreign policy to the fact that it plays diplomacy the same way one plays chess--with cool calculation, foresight, secretiveness and a poker face.

But in tring to treat its own chess grandmasters like pawns, the Soviet authorities may have gone beyond their depth. Last summer Viktor Korchnoi, a leading contender for the world championship, defected while in the Netherlands; he had been in the Kremlin doghouse since 1974, when he gave an interview in Yugoslavia that the Kremlin thought was too candid.

Now comes--or rather goes--Boris Spassky, the recent world champion, who has been living in France for a year and now says he is going to re-enter the world championship matches despite what he says is a Soviet ban on his doing so.

The Soviet Chess Federation replies that there is no ban, but it doesn't really matter. For Mr. Spassky to invent a ban and then boast of defying it would be even worse, from the Kremlin's standpoint, than for him to defy an acknowledged ban. In either event, Mr. Spassky's chances of returning to the Soviet Union in good standing are pretty slim.

The Soviets have thus lost two valuable pieces to the West in less than a year. While it may be premature to suggest that the Kremlin is losing its expertise, it is certainly in order to urge Messrs. Carter, Vance and Brzezinski to brush up on their chess.

LOSING THE VERBAL BATTLE

From The Springfield (Mo.) Leader and Press

If the politicians had to stand for election before those who keep watch over the language, all would lose. This disquieting prospect arises from balloting by the 150 arbiters of usage who form the Usage Panel of the American Heritage Dictionary.

Edwin ("Strictly Speaking") Newman, panel chairman, reports that only two words coined by the politicians could muster approval from as many as half of the panelists. Those words are "gavel," used as a verb, and "powerbroker," used as a noun to signify a person who deals in political power or influence.

The biggest losers were "prioritize" and"free up." These pseudo-verbs were voted down by more than 90 per cent of the panelists.

"Prioritize" elicited the most acid comments. Heywood Hale Broun: "I'm afraid this one headachizes me to much for comment." Red Smith, sports columnist: "Let's negatize this one, wordwise."

"Input" got a chilly receiption from Nat Hentoff, critic and writer: "The kind of mechanical shorthand that rusts thought." Peter de Vries, novelist and satirist, found obnoxious the use of "downplay" as a verb: "If I heard a speaker use it, I would upget and outwalk." Writer Isaac Asimov urged that the phrase "cost out" be "valued out."

Although we wish them well, we doubt they will succeed in their effort to puritize the speech of politics and government. Their input, in orther words, quickly will be downput.

Hoffa Probe Junked?

New Grand Juries zeroing in on Crime Syndicate Families' infiltration of Teamsters

WASHINGTON— No doubt the fallout radiating from the grave into which Jimmy Hoffa was dumped is mutating the Mafia and its allies and some tough teamsters in Detroit and further east. Anyone tracing the intertwining roots of the crime syndicate families in the big auto town and the Big Apple soon learns how tightly knit are the Michigan and New York combines.

Having given up on solving the mystery of the July 30, 1975, literal liquidation of Jimmy H, the Justice Department and some of its strike forces are using the Hoffa investigation as the trampoline from which to bounce into the national crime syndicate.

The ties between the Detroit and New York-New Jersey "organizations" have long been known to the special FBI desks -- and were clearly outlined at a Hoffa situation conference of FBI agents some time ago.

So the recent spate of indictments which already have rocked two alleged Detroit crime syndicate families, the Melis and the Giacalones, as well as some teamsters officials, are considered the traditional, profitable fallout of any major investigation. Until this writing, some 14 well-muscled and well-connected -- especially with the Midwest teamsters -- characters have been indicted on charges ranging from violations of the anti-extortion sections of the Hobbs Act to defiance of the Taft-Hartley law.

As a new Detroit grand jury next month begins peeling off layers of the interlocking Midwest -East Coast combines and linking its connections to influential teamsters, the indictments will stalrtle the natioin.

Note that "Little Vince" Meli, recently indicted on charges of forcing members of Detroit Teamsters Local 299 to pay employer contributions into some Teamster union pension funds, is the 55-year-old son of Angelo Meli of olden times. Back in the early '60s, the elder Meli, according to Senate records, was one of the five dons in the crime syndicate council that ruled Detroit's underworld. And in the same records, "Little Vince" was one of "The Big Men."

There are FBI dossiers which disclose the intimate relationship of these families with some other teamsters officials as well as with the New York-New Jersey units. So watch for grand jury action in the rotting metropolitan area there.

Today, the teamsters are surrounded by Justice Department strike forces. The big Brotherhood has been the juiciest tenderloin in the labor movement. Small wonder. The latest International Brotherhood of Teamsters headquarters report reveals total assets of $131.9 million. Of that some $19 million are in cash bank deposits.

So there's room for largesse. Some 23 general officers and trustees run a yearly salary and expense total of $1.28 million. During 1977, president Fitzsimmons's income and tab will race towards $200,000 annually. There are also a free presidential home near Washington, $2.5 million worth of private aircraft and a car pool.

To explain all this, "Fitz" called the headquarters staff together April 5 in the union's auditorium here as a prelude to the big Washington Hilton rally the next day -- when some 2,000 local officers of the International Brotherhood came to cheer him. At both meetings, Fitz said bitterly that the government, the radicals, the lawyers and the media are out to destroy not only the teamsters, but the labor movement as well.

From the lowest echelons right on up to the executive staff at the first closed session, and from the vice presidents who pledged their loyalty at the mass meeting,24 hours later, came the message, "Go get them, Fitz." So he's the man out front.

Soon the dissenters, sounding much like the Miners for Democracy in the notorious United Mine Workers civil war and the Ed Sadlowski Steelworkers Fight Back in th United Steelworkers election (which still has no official count), will have their day in court and in the high-ceilinged office of Secretary of Labor Ray Marshall. They want "Fitz" ousted. And then the rest of the International Executive Board -- some of whose wage and expense accounts run between $40,000 and $77,000 a year from just the national office alone. Most of them draw local pay as well. And pensions. And expenses.

So all this is a juicy cut of tenderloin, as the old cops used to say. There's even a $30,000-a-year union headquarters chef, though Secretary of HEW Joe Califano only pays his chief cook $12,000 annually. Class is class.

What use can the Brotherhood have for its aircraft without flyboys? So the union has four pilots on the permanent payroll, two captains at $30,450 each annually and two co-pilots at $17,690.

There's an in-house $10,971-a-year barber. There are other pleasantries. So the motivation of the outs to get in or to make Fitzsimmons the fall guy isn't always lofty or invidious. It's a good, well-buttered piece of bread. Not to mention the constant wooing by those who seek some of the $48 millioin a year in national office investments in "marketbale securities." All this has only tangential relationship with the peoples' central bank, sometimes known as the Teamsters Central States pension fund.

If anything can be dubbed "most unique," this brotherhood is it. There's nothing anywhere like the International Brotherhood of Teamsters. It's a world all its own and its leaders, many of whom are hard-working unionists, for some strange reason suddenly are startled by the intrusion of investigative society on its milieu. Some day it will all be dug by some cultural anthropologist seeking its artifacts -- its totems and status symbols, mostly golf clubs.

But for the moment, most of the digging is being done by at least four grand juries. And they aren't really digging for Hoffa any more.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Arabs Gain in Influence With U.S. Mideast Policy Makers

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- A subtle shift has occurred in the political pressures that shape U.S. policy toward the Middle East. Suddenly, the top policymakers are paying more attention to the Arab arguments.

The change in the political balance has been so delicate that it has been hardly perceptible. There has been no twisting of arms, no dangling of economic bait, no influence buying in the Korean manner. The policy makers simply have become aware that the Arabs now speak with more authority than they used to.

The story is told between the lines of secret documents, which describe the increasing dependence of the United States on Arab oil and the growing economic power of the Arab oil potentates. Here are the highlights:

— A CIA analysis, cited by President Carter, warns that the worldwide demand for oil is likely to outstrip supply in the next five to 10 years. The president didn't mention that the CIA also estimates that the United States will double its oil imports from Saudi Arabia by 1980. The United States now imports 1.2 million barrels of oil from Saudi Arabia every day. This is expected to hit a daily 2.5 million barrels in less than three years.

— A separate, secret CIA survey claims that the oil-producing countries now have a prodigious $34 billion invested in U.S. holdings. The Arab oil sheikdoms have entrusted their portfolios to such mighty banks as the Bank of America, Chase Manhattan, First National City Bank and Morgan Guaranty. These financial institutions speak with a soft voice but carry big clout in the backrooms of Washington.

— Secret Treasury documents reveal that the Saudis have asked the industrial nations for safeguards against inflation, fluctuating exchange rates and political uncertainties. One classified memo suggests that the Saudis feel they've been taken advantage of. To help alleviate the world energy shortage, they have produced more oil than they need to sell to meet their own revenue needs. The surplus has gone into investments in the West, particularly the United States.

The Saudis, therefore, feel they deserve safeguards for their investments. They have asked for assurances that their overseas assets won't be frozen. They want an "indexation" agreement, which would tie their oil revenues to changes in inflation. Unless their assets are properly protcted, the Saudis have suggested, they may be compelled to keep their wealth in the ground. In other words, they may cut back oil production.

Yet the Saudis feel that "all they get from the West, particularly the U.S.," one secret Treasury memo states, "is abuse in the form of anti-boycott legislation and threats, and the postponement of arms sales."

The memo sums up the new political realities in these succinct words: "The Saudis' ... financial surplus is really beginning to mount rapidly. Their leverage on the industrial countries has increased."

Oil Fiasco: President Carter has called for sacrifices to reduce oil consumption. A similar appeal was made four years ago by then-President Richard Nixon. He also sought to encourage more domestic oil production by slapping fees on oil imports.

It was left to the Federal Energy Administration to collect the fees. This undertaking, known formally as the Mandatory Oil Imports Program, has been a fiasco. Perhaps the failure can be attributed to bureaucratic bungling. Or perhaps the administrators, who are known to be soft on Big Oil, were reluctant to put the bite on their oil friends. We can't say.

But we have had access to the top-secret findings of an audit, which tells the story. "Controls and procedures were inadequate," the government auditors found, "to assure that the fees ... were properly assessed and collected."

The collections were so haphazard that the administrators never got straight how much the oil companies were paying. "There was no operational system to verify that companies were paying import fees on oil imports," states the audit, "even though over $560,000 in contracts were awarded to computerize and improve the program."

The import reports submitted by the oil companies were not checked. The energy agency, therefore, "had no assurance that duplicate or fraudulent licenses were not being used and that ... importers were paying all the required supplemental fees on oil imports."

But here's the kicker. "Under certain conditions," the auditors report, "companies can request refunds of import fees ... The refunds were determined by the companies, and there was no verification of these amounts to determine appropriateness and accuracy. The integrity of the companies was relied upon to furnish correct refund amounts."

In other words, the oil companies got back as much money as they requested, no questions asked. "Some improper refunds were identified," states the audit. So much for the integrity of the oil companies.

Perhaps needless to say, the program did little to discourage imports and encourage domestic production. Oil imports rose from a daily 3.4 million barrels in 1970 to 6 million barrels in 1975.

Footnote: A spokesman for the imports fees program told us that program officials disagreed with the audit. He said the audit was done haphazardly and too quickly.

Profile in Courage:

Determination-ambition helps young cancer patient plan future

A courageous young man who really appreciates life and the many things around him is Jon Winston, 17-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Winston of Gideon.

In 1975, Jon discovered a lump in his upper thigh, and a biopsy determined that at age 15 he had a form of cancer known as rhabdomysarcoma.

Jon's first reaction was: "I heard about it on TV and read about it, but why me?"

Winston is active in baseball, basketball and golf, and it was during the latter part of the 1975 summer baseball season that he first noticed a lump in the pelvic area that caused his leg to hurt and cramp. He also noticed that he had slowed down a lot in speed and had started walking with a limp.

"That's when my Mother noticed," Winston continued. "She took me to a doctor in Poplar Bluff who performed a biopsy in August and discovered it was cancer."

Jon was then taken to Baptist Memorial Hospital in Memphis where he remained until Oct. 15, 1975, his 16th birthday.

From August to October, Winston took 35 cobalt treatments and chemotherapy. On Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, he gave blood samples for tests and on Tuesdays and Thursdays he received treatments.

Jon, like many so afflicted including Bryan Piccolo, the Chicago Bear football player who died of cancer in 1970, was scared. "I cried, was scared and tried to put it out of my mind."

Unlike the Piccolo story, Winston's cancer has been arrested, according to his doctor, Dr. Kirby Smith. Dr. Smith, Jon continued, resembles President Jimmy Carter.

Meanwhile, not only coping with his fears, he watched how his parents reacted. "It about killed my parents. Being the only child, I was very protected, and neither could understand why their son had to go through it."

Winston indicated that his mother showed her feelings more than his father who seemed to hide his feelings from him.

While in the hospital Jon received about 135 cards and 48 letters. "Everybody was just so nice," he remarked.

A young man much behind the scenes, but one whom Jon attributes with keeping his morale up, was his best friend, Ira Hart.

Ironic is the fact that the story of Ira and Jon can be pointed out as being similar to the Gale Sayers and Piccolo story. Ira and Jon have been friends since third grade, and Ira made several trips with Jon's folks to visit him in the hospital.

Ira and Jon have shared their atheletic, scholastic and "fooling around" abilities at Gideon High School, and are known by many of their friends and teachers as "Salt and Pepper."

After Winston was dismissed from the hospital, he was almost a full semester behind in his school work. But he quickly picked up where he left off and in about a month and a half, he completed the semester with some B's.

Bob Hering, a neighbor of Jon and his folks and a speech and drama teacher at Gideon High School, helped Winston with his studies, which included English III, geology and zoology.

In the spring of 1976, Jon was given the okay to participate in spring baseball at GHS. The season marked quite a comeback for Jon, who earned two trophies from his school. One was for being the most improved player on the team and the other was for the best batting average, .438.

This year he returned to the basketball team and started at forward. His best game was the last game in regional tournament play against Risco when he scored 22 points.

Besides participating in school sports, Winston also plays the trombone in band I.

It was during this year's marching band season that Jon discovered a second knot approximately three and a half inches from the first point of the first one. This time, however, the knot turned out to be an infected lymph gland.

Winston's current plans include continuing his education by attending Central Methodist College at Fayette. He also hopes to play college baseball and will major in physical education.

He says, "I know I couldn't play pro ball as I've no special talent but would like someday to maybe be able to coach professional ball."

Jon confesses that his coaches still "baby around" with him and warn him that if his leg hurts to tell them, but if a strong will, ambition and personality pay off, Jon will go far.

One thing for certain, Winston concluded, when something like this happens, you know who your real friends are."

Ponders situation

Sharing a few laughs

Between classes at Gideon High School Jon and Ira share a few laughs about happenings to the both of them in school, on the field and while running around. No one sees the serious side of either of these two young men when they share how one another felt the day Jon found out he had cancer. (Daily Standard photo)

Ask the Pastor

Who will see Jesus the second time

By Rev. E. A. Pembleton

Dear Pastor Pembleton: I was taught that when Jesus comes the second time, only those who are living for Him will see Him. What does the Bible say about that? - Mirian.

Dear Miriam: Every man, woman and child living in the world when Jesus returns will se Him at His second coming. The staggering three-fold (Luke 9:26) brightness of His coming will stretch from horizon to horizon and the atmosphere will be charged with brilliant glory like lightning. No one will be able to hide. Every living soul will be forced to face Christ. Christ left no loophole for doubt or misunderstanding.

The SECRET RAPTURE so commonly believed and taught today is not in the Bible. It is an invention of men. Nor is the second coming a spiritual coming into the heart at conversion. It does not take place at a man's death nor is it figurative: to be manifested by better world conditions. These theories are all man-made. The second coming is to be a literal, world-wide, visible, personal appearance of Christ in the clouds to bring this world to an end and reward or punish all men and women. "Behold, He cometh with clouds; and EVERY EYE shall see Him." Rev. 1:7. "For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be."

Dear Pastor Pempbleton: We have a neighbor who has the gift of healing. Of this I am sure, because when he lays his hands on you, you can feel intense vibrations go through your body. Although he says God gives him the power to heal, and many people come to him for their ailments, he himself does not go to church, but rather listens to healing services over the radio. He used to come to our church until he became so enthusiastic over this healing. Is it wrong to practice this without worshiping the Lord with others? - Susie.

Dear Suele: While I am in no position to judge your neighbor, your description of him and his work would lead me to view him with extreme caution. In Isaiah 8:20 we are given a reliable way of evaluating one who claims to serve God: "To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." In view of the teachings of the Bible it is impossible for me to believe that a man being led of God would disconnect himself from the church. In James 5:15 the true gift of healing is definitely linked with God's church. The Bible warns in Revelation 13 and 16 that great wonders will be performed in the last days, and that "spirits of devils" will work miracles. (Revelation 16:14) God's followers must be alert to deceptions. Our safety lies in studying God's word so that we will be able to differentiate between the false and the true.

Dear Pastor Pembleton: Your column means so much to me, I cut it out of the newspaper every week and count it as a great blessing from the Lord. The Bible says "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God." (1 Cor. 15:50.) How, then, can the redeemed be flesh and bones? - Pat.

Dear Pat: The Bible uses the term "flesh" to describe the unconverted man. "That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit." (John 3:6) The term spirit refers to the converted or "born again" man. In Romans 8:8, 9, we read, "They that are in the flesh cannot please God. But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you." So the Bible is simply saying in 1 Cor. 15 that no one can enter God's kingdom unless conversion first takes place and flesh becomes spirit.

Weddings

Mrs. Dennis Eldon Ziegenhorn

Karen Ann Underwood, 104 Kennedy Dr. and Dennis Eldon Ziegenhorn, 113 Greenbriar, were wed recently at the First Christian Church, North Main. The Rev. Paul Walker, the church pastor, officiated.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Elmer R. Underwood of Bloomfield. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Ziegenhorn, 1005 N. Kingshighway.

The bride chose a gown of white Quiana fashioned with slightly raised waist and scooped neckline, framed with three dimensional Venice lace appliques. Lace appliques also trimmed the caps of the shepherdess sleeves. The skirt, softly gathered at the back waist, fell into a full circle at the hemline, then swept into a full, attached chapel train.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Judy Stamp, 930 N. West St.

A receptioon for the couple and their guests followed at the Sikeston Country Club, Highway 60 East.

The bride is a 1969 graduate of Bloomfield High School. She attended Southeast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau and is presently employed by the Bank of Sikeston.

The groom is a 1966 graduate of Sikeston High School and attended Memphis State University. He is employed at Ziegenhorn Insurance, & Real Estate.

Mr. and Mrs. Ziegenhorn live at 113 Greenbriar.

Mr. and Mrs. Ricky Lynn Parker

In a candlelight ceremony April 9 at the Murray Lane Baptist Church, Linda Cheryl Kirkland of Sikeston Route 5 and Ricky Lynn Parker of Sikeston Route 3 were married. The Rev. Wade Paris, church pastor, officiated.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kirkland of Sikeston Route 5 and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wade Parker of Sikeston Route 3.

The bride chose a gown of all-over Chantilly type lace fashioned with a slightly raised waistline, with sheer V-shaped yoke and with a high lace trimmed neckline trimmed with sequins. The Victorian sleeves were cuffed with lace and trimmed with a full circle merged into a semi- cathedral train, with a deep lace ruffle, edged in cameo lace with sequin trim bordering the tiered lace edged bouffant veil of imported illusion.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Debi McConnel of New Orleans, La., sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Judi Null of St. Louis and Mrs. Joy Kirkland, sister-in-law of the bride from St. Peters. Junior bridesmaid was the groom's cousin, Ellen Freeborg of Houston, Tex.

Best man was Steve Parker of Sikeston, the groom's brother. Groomsmen was Garry Waldron of Sikeston and Jimmy Hardin of Minneapolis, Minn. Junior groomsman was the bride's nephew, Tommy Richardson of New Olreans, La.

Ringbearers were Danny Parker of Sikeston, the groom's cousin and Neal Kirkland of St. Peters, the bride's nephew.

Guests were ushered by James Rhodes of Matthews and Armand Porter of Sikeston. They also served as candlelighters.

A reception for the couple and their guests immediately followed the ceremony in the church's Fellowship Hall. Servers were Mrs. Elizabeth Parker of Sikeston, the grooms aunt, Mrs. Lorene Wamble of Morehouse, the bride's aunt and Mrs. Eula Cobb of Black Oak, Ark.

The bride is a 1976 graduate of Sikeston High School and attended Southeast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau.

The groom is a 1974 graduate of Matthews High School and is employed by Parker Brothers, Inc. of Sikeston.

The pastor speaks

Money!

"Keep your life free from love of money, and be content with what you have." When taken our of context as they so often are, the first phrase sounds unrealistic and the second unreasonable. But when understood within the context of this writer's practical exhortations to his readers, it becomes an exceedingly productive principle.

In a sense, money is an arbitrary medium by which we exchange things that have some measurable value. When one becomes oriented upon the medium, he has lost perspective and a sense of value. When Jesus urged his disciples to "seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you" (Mt. 6:33 KJV), he indicated that we are to put priority on untimate values (which are spiritual) and work down to derived values (which are physical, but as real).

Therefore, the author of the Letter to the Hebrews can exhort to forget money-love and to find our contentment in what we have. What we have is none less than God, and he promised "I will not fail you or forsake you" (Josh. 1:5)

God does not say to the poor man: Look at your peanuts and be content because that is all you will ever have. Nor does he say to the wealthy man: Look at your warehouses and be content because you will never have anything more satisfying than these. With no necessary reference to material possessions, he says: Look at me; you have me, and you will always have me because I will never leave you. Contentment comes not from pretneding that our circumstances are satisfactory, but from the realization that Christ is sufficient.

Getting married?

The Daily Standard, 205 S. New Madrid St., now has new wedding forms available at the front office or at the women's desk. Business hours are from 7 a.m., to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Forms will be mailed if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is provided.

The deadline for weddings is three weeks after date of wedding. Pictures will be returned if a self-addressed, stamped envelope large enough to hold a picture is supplied. Color pictures are discouraged. There is no charge for running a wedding. We are happy to publish it.

Landscaping: an investment that grows

WASHINGTON -- A tree in your yard may be like money in the bank -- or, more accurately, like a high-dividend mutual fund. That's a conclusion to be drawn from a number of studies conducted by real estate groups, the nursery and landscape industry and, most recently, the U.S. Forest Service.

The research project published by the Forest Service found that a well-landscaped home will sell for as much as 20 per cent more than a similar house without trees, shrubs, plants, and a healthy lawn. Not only will a house sell for more if it is landscaped properly, but it will sell easier. In about 200 examples it was found that a home with an abundance of trees had a much greater sales appeal than the others.

The American Association of Nurserymen, the national organization for the people who grow and sell and install and care for environmental plantings, is currently stressing the financial value of landscape improvements as one aspect of their nationwide public interest program which they call "Green Survival."

The AAN spokesmen explain it this way. "The Green Survival movement began as a natural response to environmental concerns -- fresh, clean air, clear waters, beauty, sound barriers, and so on. Now we recognize even broader implications. Conserving energy, for example, is a matter of survival today, and green, growing things can be energy-savers when they are planned with that aim in mind.

"By the same token, the dollar value of the things we buy has never had the importance it has now, and it is good to know that landscape plantings increase in their value as they grow through the years, and increase the value of the property where they are. It is hard to name many home purchases that don't depreciate instead. So we look on the financial investment value of environmental plantings as just one more expression of Green Survival."

Nutrition

Heart pills , wine don't mix

Questions from readers about food and diet are welcomed. Letters should be addressed to: Dr. James W. Nordstrom, Cooperative Extension, Lincoln University, Jefferson City, Mo. 65101

Q. I take a lot of pills each day for a heart condition. I understand that certain foods, such as wine and cheese, may cause a dangerous reaction with drugs used to treat heart disease. Please send me a list of foods I should look out for.

A. Foods that contain tyramine, a naturally occurring substance, may cause serious problems when certain drugs classified as monamine oxidase inhibitors are being taken. Examples of the drugs are Eutonyl and Eutron for blood pressure, and Nardil, Marplan and Parnate for depression.

The tryamine containing foods include Chianti wine, pickled herring, chicken liver, well-aged cheese and chocolate. Possible bad effects of combining these foods with the drugs listed above are severe headache, rapid increase in blood pressure, vomiting and even death.

Licorich in large amounts may cause severe reactions ranging from headache to heart failure when any drug is being taken that affects the heart or blood pressure. When anticoagulants are used to help prevent blood clotting (Dicumarol, Coumadin, etc.) green leafy vegetables will tend to cancel out the drug's effect because of their content of vitamin K, which is antagonistic to anticoagulants. High does of vitamin E also work against the Coumarin drugs.

Is it true that alcoholic beverages need to be avoided when taking medicine for the heart.

A. Alchohol can have dangerous effects when combined with a wide range of drugs from aspirin to tranquilizers. It may either diminish or enchance the effects of the drugs, and the results can be fatal. It is therefore wise to avoid alcoholic beverages when under drug therapy unless one's physician gives advice to the contrary. Alcohol is a fairly potent drug itself, of course.

Q. Do some drugs cause nutritional problems?

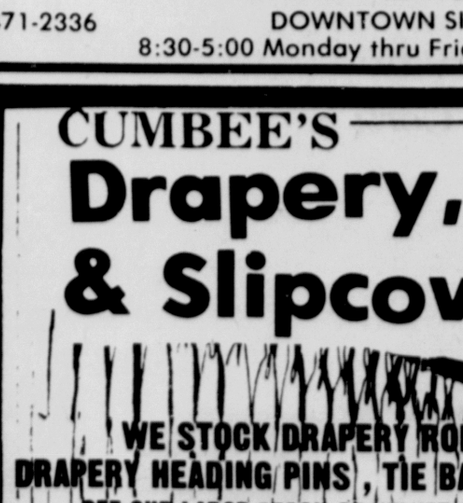

A. Drugs may interfere with the utilization of vitamins and other nutrients and may either enchance the storage of nutrients in the body or increase their excretion. Some effects caused by tetracylines, a group of antibiotic compouonds can be cited for illustration. Changes induced by these drugs include decreased absorption of calcium, iron, magnesium, zinc, amino acids and fat, and a decreased synthesis of vitamin K by intestinal bacteria. In addition, increased urinary excretion of vitamin C, riboflavin, amino acids, folic acid and niacin may occur.

It is important to realize that drugs have significant effects on the body and that all of these may not be desirable. One should therefore work closely with a physician when undergoing drug therapy. Nutritional counseling from a physician and-or a dietitian is very desirable at such times, since food supplements may be required in some cases and specific foods and supplements will need to be avboided at other times.

How to recognize your car needs a tune-up

Keeping your car properly tuned can save you money, time and aggrevation. An improperly tuned car is hard to start, bucks, jolts and stalls out in the early going and wastes gas--up to one gallon in six.

How do you know when your car needs a tune-up? Here are five indicators:

Miles Driven: Car manufacturers list tune-up intervals in the owner's manual. Each car is different. Some may not run efficiently for as long a period as the manual states; some may be efficient over a longer period. When you approach the interval suggested by the manufacturer for your car, be alert to the kind of performance you're getting.

Gas Mileage: It's a good practice to keep records on the miles per gallon your car delivers. When this begins to decline, a tune-up is in order.

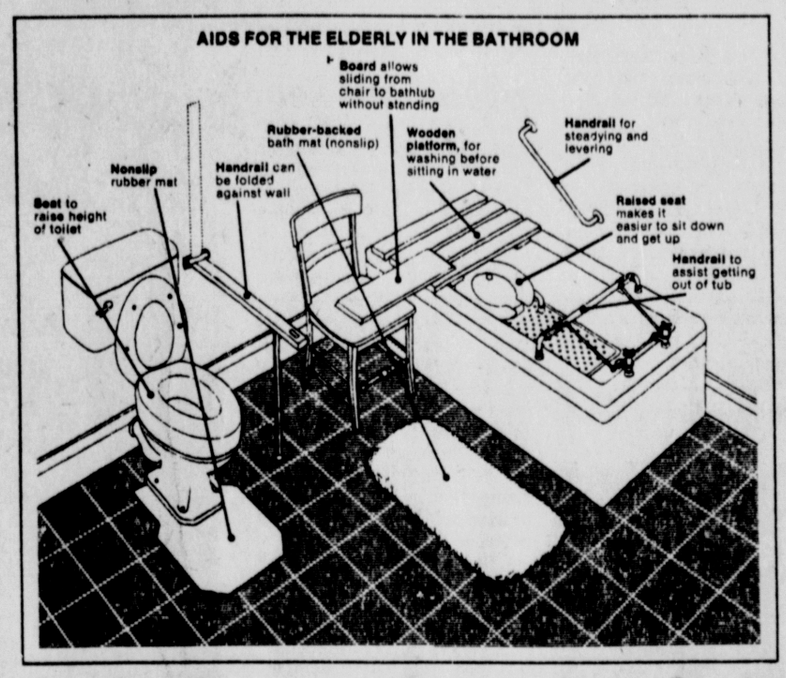

Hard Starting: If you have trouble starting your car, the problem is likely to be in the ignition system. Be certain, however, that you are following the starting procedures prescribed by the manufacturer before you conclude the car needs work.

Rough Idling: This is a sure sign that your car needs a tune-up. If the car is not tuned it generally won't operate smoothly while idling.

Acceleration: Low compression engines and emission control devices make it impossible for a relatively new car to deliver instant response, but all cars can and should provide a smooth, uninterrupted climb during heavy acceleration. If your car doesn't, it needs a tune-up.

Apart from avoiding the inconvenience and annoyance of a car that won't start or stalls repeatedly, the motorist who keeps his car tuned up saves money. It costs a typical motorist $40 to $50 in wasted gas to drive 5,000 miles with a poorly tuned engine--which is the price of an average tune-up. Since a tune-up should help your car deliver top performance for at least 10,000 to 15,000 miles, you are clearly ahead by having your car tuned on a regular basis. The American Automobile Association has found that even minor tune-ups can improve mileage by 10 per cent.

Safer bathrooms for seniors

Safer bathrooms for senior design

Peace of mind and independence are two factors that can make the life of the elderly richer and more comfortable. It's important to them not to have to ask for assistance, and not to have to worry about accidents. Often some simple and relatively inexpensive adjustments in the bathroom plan for an older person can do much to achieve a sense of security.

From a new Reader's Digest book, Family Health Guide and Medical Encyclopedia, come suggestions for age-proofing your bathroom: non-skid mats around the toilet and tub; a higher seat for the toilet and an adjacent handrail, to aid in sitting down and standing up.

Handrails beside and across the bathrub and a raised seat in the tub itself make it possible for the less agile person to get in and out unassisted--for many oldsters, asking for help in the bathroom is an embarrassing invasion of their privacy. You can even construct a platform at the back of the tub, to make the transition into the water easier and safer.

The raised seats are available at most hospital-supply stores, and the handrails can be obtained at hardware and bathroom-accessory shops. The cost is not great, and the peace of mind it purchases can make a big difference to a senior citizen.

The homemaker who said, "I don't really need an automatic dishwasher", probably has never owned one. According to researchers at KitchenAid appliances, the modern automatic dishwasher is now one of the most sought-after kitchen appliances. (Many new homes, condominiums and newly remodeled kitchens include dishwashers as a "standard feature".)

Slave' daughter remembers

COFFEYVILLE, Kan. (AP) — Her grandmother came to the United States on a slave ship and her mother and father also were slaves.

But Odee Jackson Webber thinks the past should be left alone.

When the television presentation of "Roots" captivated the nation in January, the 84-year-old Coffeyville woman watched only to the point where a slave was branded by his captors.

Her grandmother, Charlotte Igman, was branded on the cheek during her journey to America, Mrs. Webber said, and when an African in "Roots" was about to suffer a similar fate, she fled to her bedroom.

"When I saw the branding iron, I just couldn't stand it anymore," she said in an interview. "We always knew what it was like in the old times. Grandma always told us about the African village and coming over on the slave ship and I don't want to know more of it. I have a bad heart for that. It just made me think of what my grandma went through."

The revival of historical interest in slavery created by "Roots" and the growing consciousness of blacks toward their African heritage are frowned upon by the spry, quick-minded woman.

"I think they should let the dead dog die," she said. "I don't condone what happened, I just think we ought to go the way we're going. I imagine the little colored kids who looked at that thing, it would make them think evil toward white folks. The love they had might be lost."

A reliance on love has kept Mrs. Webber strong enough to endure the hardship of her 84 years. She has witnessed the deaths of her parents, her 15 brothers and sisters, one husband and her only child. She has suffered cancer and heart disease.

"I just felt like I had to bear up and keep going. I've been a Christian ever since I was a girl," said Mrs. Webber, the 13th of 16 children born to Paul and Martha Davis.

"They always tell me 13 is bad luck," she added. "But it must be good luck because of my 16 brothers and sisters, I'm the only one left and I'm still keeping the old house standing."

Mrs. Webber and her husband, Boyd, live in the same white-frame house where she was born and raised. She is the last survivor of the Votaw Colony, a settlement where blacks gathered years after the Civil War to escape plantation life.

From long conversations around the stove with her mother, Mrs. Webber has carried the story of her family's heritage from the time her grandmother came to the United States sometime in the 19th century to the present.

Her mother, Martha Igman, was a slave on a plantation in Shelby County, Texas, when she met Paul Davis, a slave born in Louisiana who was purchased by Martha's owner.

"My father got a whipping for barbequing a hog without permission one day, so he told my mama he'd take her out of there," Mrs. Webber said. "So he got a bunch of them together from the plantation and headed for Kansas.

"The bloodhounds chased them from the plantation and they set a fire in the woods to catch them, but they all made it free by wading through the rivers. And they ended up here around Burlington (Kan.)."

In 1882 Davis met Daniel Votaw, a Quaker humanitarian who bought 160 acres of land north of Coffeyville to form the black colony that bore his name.

"Papa was the instigator of bringing the other ones to the colony," said Mrs. Webber. "Votaw, he took a liking to my father and gave him eight acres of land and eight more later on."

The colonists suffered through the harsh first winter with a minimum of food and clothing, but in the spring they planted corn, wheat, oats and barley. Under Davis' leadership, the colony grew to 17 families before floods wiped out their crops.

The colonists relied on religion to get them by in those days.

"That's all we knew, we didn't know anything but the church," Mrs. Webber said. "We were devout church people, singing and praying all the time. No devilment, no hanky-panky."

Growing vegetables in the garden

What can be better than vine ripened, juicy tomatoes or crisp green beans picked fresh from your own garden? Somehow what you've grown yourself always seems to taste better.

Of course, you need to do some thinking and planning before you start your garden so you'll get the best results possible. A 49-page booklet from the U.S. Department of Agriculture is designed to help. It tells how to prepare the soil, arrange the garden, and plant and care for 58 kinds of vegetables. For your copy of Growing Vegetables in the Home Garden, send 95 cents to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 110E, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

There are a couple of things to consider before you decide where to plant your garden.

Check out how much sunlight your yard gets. If you're growing leafy vegetables, they can get by in partial shade, but other vegetables need direct sunlight.

Garden soil needs to be fertile, deep, tillable, and well drained. It also should be reasonably free of stones.

Unless you live in a dry-land area, you should keep all the garden space fully occupied throughout the growing season. When you arrange the garden, group all early-maturing crops together so that as soon as one crop is removed, you can plant another to take its place. It's best to follow a crop with an unrelated one.

For instance, early peas or beans can be happily followed by late cabbage, celery, carrots or beets. You don't always have to wait until the early crop is entirely removed--you can plant a later one between the rows of the early crop, for example, sweet corn between potato rows. But, crops that are likely to be attacked by the same diseases and insects shouldn't follow each other.

If you're planning a small garden, you only need a few tools. It's better to buy a few simple, high-grade tools that will last than to get poorly designed or low grade materials that are good for only a season or two. For most gardens, the only tools you'll need are a spade or spading fork, a steel bow rake, a 7-inch common hoe, and a garden hose. A trowel can be useful in transplanting, but it's not essential. If you've properly prepared the soil, plants can be set more easily with your hands than with a trowel.

Growing Vegetables in the Home Garden (95 cents) is one of over 200 selected Federal consumer publications listed in the Spring edition of the catalog, Consumer Information. The catalog is published quarterly by the Consumer Information Center of the General Services Administration. You can get a free copy by sending a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Open Mind

Mental patients insurance

Dear Folks:

I have phoned a lot of insurance companies for insurance for myself. But as soon as I say I am an outpatient at a state hospital, they say I can't get any insurance at all because I'm a poor risk.

I have a medical card from Missouri Division of Family Services for public assistance, dental care, nursing home, hospital services. But it makes me feel bad because I don't want the state to put me in the ground when I die.

There are other people like me that need help. Some don't tell the insurance companies that they have been in the state hospital.

I would like to have insurance like other people do.

UNINSURABLE AT 36

Doctor's letter may help explain

Dear Uninsurable:

You are in company with literally thousands in the St. Louis area, who are or have been mentally ill, epileptic, retarded, amputees, etc. At Goodwill Industries we work with hundreds of handicapped and disabled men and women every year. Our purpose is to assist them in their total efforts toward rehabilitation, including finding suitable employment. Yet many return to us later and say that it does not do any good to learn to work and to find employment because society will not permit them to enjoy the fruits of their labor -- such as insurance as a means of protection for themselves and their family.

We at Goodwill know that progress is being made because each year we work with dozens of St. Louis area employers who are willing to give the handicapped and disabled a chance. Probably the best avenue for you to follow is to "shop around" for insurance from among several agents. Explain fully the circumstances surrounding your confinement, describe your present mental stability, and take with you (or have mailed if the doctor prefers) a letter from the doctor (psychologist, psychiatrist) who is familiar with your period of confinement. In this letter the doctor should describe your illness, discuss your present mental state, and recommend you for insurance coverage based on your being no more a risk than anyone else who might have had any other type of illness and who is insurable.

If this does not result in insurance coverage at reasonable rates, then you should pursue coverage with the State Insurance Board or through the Consumers Of... of the State Attorney Gene...'s Office in Jefferson City.

There is always hope, and there will be someone out there in the insurance industry who will work with you to provide you with the protection you seek.

Sincerely yours,
Thomas R. Selman
Associate Executive Vice President
Goodwill Industries

Dear Uninsurable:

The underwriting requirements of health insurance companies do not automatically preclude issuing a policy because a person has undergone treatment for mental illness. Of course a determining factor would depend on the diagnosis and severity of the condition and whether the person is presently being treated for the illness.

If the condition were severe, the insuring company would be placing itself in situations that present a greater risk than normal, allowing for greater exposure to claims than would be anticipated under normal underwritings procedures.

In any case, the applicant should attach a copy of his hospital medical and physician reports for analysis by the insurance company to whom he has applied.

Pastor Paul's Patter

Rev. Paul D. Walker
First Christian Church

I talked with God this morning.

I thanked him for the beauty of the day, for health, for love,

For opportunities of service, for challenging work, for freedmom, for faith, for hope, for shelter.

I thanked him for my imperfection and the joy of growing experiences, for a world that was not yet his Kingdom and my calling to Christian witness, for a Church struggling to know more completely and to do more adequately his divine and holy will.

I confessed my sins of majoring in minors, of being busy but making little progress, of many procrastinations, of having spent so little time with my family.

I humbly asked for forgiveness, for a keener discernment of people's real needs, for more insight into the joy of faith, for wisdom to know the real values, for strength of will and courage of purpose.

I talked with God this morning. Did you? What did you say to him?

Chaffee couple celebrates 40th

CHAFFEE — Mr. and Mrs. Frank Landewee of Chaffee Route 1, celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary Saturday, with a Holy Mass at St. Ambrose Catholic Church in Chaffee with the Rev. Raymond Kunkel, pastor, officiating.

Their same bridesmaid and groomsman, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Vandeven of Glennon, were present as the couple exchanged wedding bands at the altar. Mr. Landewee and the former Miss Barbara Vandeven were married April 14, 1937, at Glennon.

Present at the celebration Saturday were children of the couple, Harold Landewee, Oran; Irvin Landewee, Cape Girardeau; Jerome Landewee; Chaffee; Mrs. Elmer Kern, Mrs. Ronald Glastetter, and Mrs. Aloysious Kern, all of New Hamburg and Mrs. Charles Leitle of Joplin.

A reception followed at the American Legion Hall at Chaffee. Relatives and friends attended from St. Louis, Leopold, Lutesville and Cape Girardeau.

State health officials have in recent years warned that declining of immunization of children against diseases like measles may cause problems and some are concerned that his year might be it.

An outbreak of measles cases in Lebanon has boosted the number of measles cases in Missouri to a five-year high. More than 250 cases of measles have been reported in Laclede County, where Lebanon is located.

USDA not to allow 'turkey ham' labels

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Turkey should not be called "ham," say pork processors and hog producers. The American Meat Institute, Washington, D.C., and the National Pork Producers Council, Des Moines, Iowa, have asked the U.S. Department of Agriculture not to allow labels such as "turkey ham" The groups asked USDA to propose a regulation on the prohibition for public comment.

"Turkey ham" contains no ham and trades on the hard-won reputation of real ham, the organizations said. It is unfair to the pork industry and is confusing to consumers.

The USDA defines ham as the hind leg of any animal. But nine out of ten people believe ham to be a pork product, the groups said. In an actual product and label comparison survey of 400 consumers in four major cities, 91.4 percent associated the term ham with pork or swine.

According to the survey, consumers believe that "turkey ham" contains more than one kind of meat and is not made just from turkey. The survey was conducted by the market research firm Westat, Inc., Rockville, Md.

"We have no quarrel with the product itself. But the 'turkey ham' lable is shwon by the survey to be deceptive to consumers," said Richard lyng, President of the American Meat Institute. "USDA should end this deception and misuse of the name of one of the pork industry's valued products. Turkey processors should call their product what it is, not ham. People deserve to know what they are buying," he said. The groups accompanied their request to USDA with letters from various consumer organizations protesting that the term "turkey ham" is deceptive. The letters were previously sent to USDA in response to a 1976 proposal to set standards for various poultry products. They include statements from Consumers Union; the commissioner of consumer affairs, City of New York; the director of consumer affairs, City of New Orleans; the commissioner of consumer protection, State of Connecticut; Esther Peterson, formerly consumer advisor to the president of Giant Food Company and newly- appointed special assistant for consumer affairs to President Carter; the U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs; the Iowa Consumers League; and the Virginia Citizens Consumer Council, Inc.

The American Meat Institute is the national trade association of meat packers and processors. The National Pork Producers Council represents 80,000 individual pork producers in 35 states who raise 95 per cent of U.S. hogs.

Melodie Powell is among honored UMC women

COLUMBIA, MO — Melodie A. Powell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Powell, 411 Virginia, Sikeston, is among 50 outstanding women students at the University of Missouri-Columbia, recognized April 12 for scholarship and leadership in campus and community activities.

The University of Missouri Chapter of Women in Communications, founded as Theta Sigma Phi, honored the students at its annual Matrix dinner, "Fanfare for Fifty." Parents were invited to attend the dinner.

The local professional WICI chapter recognized Bess Schooling, wife of UMC Chancellor Herbert W. Schooling, as Woman of the Year for her role as official campus hostess and her leadership in community and campus organizations.

Mrs. Schooling, the former Bess Marie Garinger of Cradwell in Dunklin County, attended UMC Graduate School. She is a former elementary teacher and principal.

In 1967, she was named an honorary chairman of the Women's Centennial Committee, organized to mark the 100th anniversary of the admission of women to the University. She is honorary president of Fortnightly, organization of faculty wives and faculty women in the Columbia area.

Mrs. Schooling has been active in maintaining the Chancellor's Campus Residence where many guests are entertained.

Carol Again of Hickman High School and Tricia Tolliver of Rockbridge High School were honored as outstanding high school women journalists.

Mrs. Nadine Coleman, Columbia writer, spoke on "Journalism or Yearnalism."

Spring and the many lawn and garden chores it brings are fast approaching. Now is the time to make sure your lawn or garden tractor is ready.

Equipment specialists at Massey-Ferguson point out that any spark- ignition engine has three main requirements for proper operation: 1. Fuel supply to the combustion chamber. 2. A spark to ignite the fuel. 3. Adequate compression.

First, fill your tank with fresh gas (see photo No. 1) and make sure you use regular or non-leaded as specified by manufacturer's manual. Although the need for fuel is obvious, it is easy to overlook. It's also a good idea to buy your gasoline in relatively small quantities (not more than 30 days supply). Thus, you'll be sure of having fresh gasoline with the correct volatility for the season.

Make sure that the fuel shut-off valve is open, and that the vent hole in the gas cap has not become plugged.

Check Oil Level

Next, check the crankcase oil level to ensure adequate lubrication (see photo No. 2). If the oil level is checked-periodically as recommended in your service manual, the oil level should not have become low enough to cause starting difficulty. However, so little time is required for this quick check that it pays to make certain. You should also drain and change the engine oil periodically as specified in your operator's manual.

A problem in starting your engine can be caused by loose or corroded connections between battery cable and starting motor -- even though the battery itself is adequately charged.

If you suspect a poor connection, remove the nut and thoroughly clean the battery posts (see photo No. 3), nuts, and connectors on ends of battery cables, then re-install the connector, making sure that the nut is drawn up snugly.

Inspect Spark Plug

Start your check of the iginition system by removing the spark plug (see photo No. 4) and examinging it carefully. Its appearance can be the tip-off to possible ignition- system difficulties. The gap between the electrodes should be about the thickness of a dime. If the electrodes are burned,or if the procelain insulator at the firing end of the plug is cracked, wet, or coated with wet carbon, the plug should be replaced.

Before re-installing the old plug or installing a new plug, make sure the gap between the electrodes is the thickness of a dime. Then connect the high-tension wire to the spark plug and lay the plug flat on the metal of the einge. Crank the engine to see if a spark jumps the gap between the plug electrodes.

If no spark, or only a weak spark occurs, something is wrong in the iginition system, such as dirty contacts or faulty condensor or iginition coil. If you are not mechanically inclined, you may wish to have these parts replaced by your dealer's serviceman.

If on the other hand, a spark jumps the gap, squirt a spoonful of gasoline through the spark-plug hole and re-install the plug.

Secure High-Tension Lead

The high- tension lead from coil to spark plug must be securely in place (see photo No. 5). Because the rubber insulation cover usually hides the connection, press the connector into place to make sure it has not vibrated loose.

Crank the engine to see if it will start on the fuel squirted directly into the cylinder. If it won't start, the problem is probably low compression which can be caused by a faulty head gasket, a struck or broken valve,or incorrect valve timing. In any case, correcting these difficulties is usually a job for your dealer's serviceman.

If the engine starts, but runs only a few seconds, fuel is not reaching the engine. To check out this possibility, disconnect the fuel supply line (see photo No. 6). If there is not a full flow of fuel from the line, it should be removed and cleaned, along with the fuel tank, if necessary, to remove the obstruction. If there is a full flow of fuel from the line, re-install it on the carburetor.

If the engine still does not start, fuel probably isn't getting through the carburetor. Again, correcting this is usually a job for your dealer's serviceman.

Adequate Air Supply

In addition to fuel, adequate air must be available to the carburetor to provide the correct air-fuel ration. Remove the air cleaner cover and check to see if the element has become clogged (see photo No. 7). If it has -- especially if the engine can be started with the air cleaner removed but not with it in place -- the air cleaner should be serviced or replaced. Do not operate the engine for an extended period with the air cleaner removed.

Reprime and start the engine. Then when it starts to slow down, gradually close the choke. If the engine continues to run while you are thus choking it, the air-fuel mixture normally entering the engine is too lean.

This can be due to improper carburetor adjustment, a partially clogged carburetor jet orifice, or a severe air leak that may be at the carburetor throttle shaft, in the inlet manifold, or at the junction of the inlet manifold and carburetor or of the inlet manifold and engine.

Correction of any of these air-leak difficulties usually requires dealer service.

Transmission Fluid

Operate your tractor 3-5 minutes until the fluid is warm and then check the level on the transmission fluid dip stick (see photo No. 8). If it is below the full mark, add more through the filler tube till the level comes to the full mark. Then start your engine and raise and lower the hydraulic implement lift several times if your tractor is equipped with one. This allows the fluid to fill the hydraulic cylinder. Also drive the tractor in both forward and reverse through the full range of transmission speeds. Then turn off engine, recheck fluid level, and add as needed. You may have to repeat this cycle several times.

Ann Landers

Woman expresses concern about over "friendly" brother

Dear Ann: I am writing about a problem that has concerned me for a long time. It started in grade school and continued into my high school years.

My brother (four years older) used to pester me sexually. He'd ask me to pose in the nude and undress in front of him. Once he even tried to rape me. I told my mother about it. She said, "Tell your father." I did. He looked at me as if I was crazy. So I kept away from my brother as best I could. It wasn't easy.

He was remarried recently to a woman who has a five-year-old daughter. My heart aches when I think of my brother alone with this little girl. Maybe not now, maye when she "matures," he will put her through the same hell he put me through.

This is his second marriage and I don't want to make trouble. My brother and his wife seem to get along very well together.

They live 200 miles away so I have no way of watching for the signs I know too well. Ann, should I MYOB or what? It took me many years and the help of a wonderful husband to get over my fears and anxieties. I'd hate to see my niece go through what I did. What should I do?--Concerned In Arizona

Dear Concerned: There is no way you can discuss this with your brother's wife or with the child and not stir up a hornet's nest.

If there's a chance that you can spend enough time with the youngster to win her confidence (perhaps take her for a few weekends) you might stress the importance of the body as "private property" and instruct her to tell her mother at once if ANYONE, even relatives, tries to get too "friendly." This is as far as you can go, dear.

Dear Ann Landers: Why doesn't the United States learn something from the more civilized countries?

Every year the number of children who die in traffic accidents rises in the United States, but not in Norway and Sweden. In Norway, for example, traffic fatalities among pre-school children have been reduced by 30 per cent. The reason: traffic clubs.

Children are enrolled on their third birthdays. They receive four years of "training." The traffic clubs teach children to look both ways before crossing the street, never to cross against a red light, and never to take foolish chances.

The club also warns parents not to violate traffic rules in order that they might serve as good examples for their children.

Professor Per Schioldborg of Oslo studied the traffic behavior of children and discovered that the club-trained youngsters were nearly 50 per cent more cautious than non-club members when not accompanied by adults.

Any suggestions, Ann? -- I Love Kids

Dear Love: Yes. Let's hope the National Safety Council (which does a very good job in the U.S.) sees your letter and takes some action.

CONFIDENTIAL to Needing a Lift: Surely a happy, healthy, productive day is a great joy, but it would not be so if all our days were happy, healthy and productive. We must visit a few valleys in order to appreciate the mountaintops.

Are your parents too strict? Hard to reach? Ann Landers's booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom," could help you bridge the generation gap. Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Erma's hotel

By ERMA BOMBECK

If President Carter ever considers spending the night at our house, maybe I should give him the top line.

There's a plaque in our spare bedroom that reads, "If we get to drinking Sunday afternoon and start insisting that you stay over until Tuesday, please remember we don't mean it."

That's as close to being the "Nation's Innkeeper" as we get.

Friends of our children who have "slept over" will tell you on a scale of Motel Six, we're about a three and a half.

I read an article once that told you how you make your guests more comfortable. They had a checklist that consisted of luggage racks, writing paper, envelopes, pens, sachets in drawers, extra light bulbs, hangers, shoe polish, spot remover, needle and thread, dental floss, nasal spray, non-prescription laxatives, cotton-tipped swabs, eye drops, foot powder, terry bathrobe, magnifying mirror, hair dryer and throat lozenges.

Half of those things I've never seen myself.

Possibly the only plus we have to offer is that you are treated like a member of the family. That is why we advise:

Don't lock your door at night. You'll just have to get up out of bed and unlock it early the next morning when the child whose room you are occupying rummages through the doors and closets after his clothes.

Don't ask for extra towels. After the kids have used one for their body, one for their hair, one for the left leg, one for the right leg, one to stand on, and one to throw over their neck, that's it. There are no more towels.

Check for messages. They will be posted (a) on the refrigerator door, (b) on the back of the milk bill, (c) on the envelope of yesterday's mail, (d) etched in the kitty litter.

Report for meals promptly. The Bombeck Hilton is strictly family style. Members have not been trained to hold back and have been known to cross forks and draw blood over the last chop.

Allthough the television is in the family room, reading in the guest room is permitted and reading material is furnished. (Please refrain from smart remarks about the selection of books as they were all written by me.)

Please do not ask us to accept pets. We don't have enouogh traps for the ones we got.

For laundry and valet, wake-up call, food and beverage, maid service, transportation, and other services, dial H-O-M-E.

The Kitchen Almanac

Staggering Statistics Do Americans really love hot dogs? So much so that about 14 billion are eaten every year - that's an average of nearly 80 per person. At this rate, 500 hot dogs are being consumed every second of every day. The hot dog and its history is certainly an important part of our American folklore!

Army tests womens strength

Programs designed to determine how best to expand the use of women's skills in the Army are turning into eye-openers for the women involved. Most of them had never before explored the limits of their physical endurance.

Recently completed were two separate explorations of those limits.

The first took place at Fort Jackson, South Carolina, where 880 randomly selected women soldiers were among the first in the nation to hike 15 miles, throw hand grenades, and take on the obstacle course.

They participated in a test program called Basic Initial Entry Training (BIET). The women went through the same rigorous seven-week course that is standard for men.

Preliminary results reveal that many women were able to do more than they thought they could. While they had difficulties with equipment designed for larger male physiques, they did well with M16 rifles and had little trouble with sit-ups.

Long road marches were the most troublesome. Fifteen, thirteen, ten and seven-mile marches, and a four-and-a-half mile speed march revealed the fact that most women have no idea how much they can eddure. Many of those who successfully completed these protracted tests of physical endurance were surprised at their accomplishments.

According to Dr. Linda Vaughan, associate professor of physical education at Wellesley College, Wellesley, Massachusetts, "Boys and young men usually have alot of experience with intense physical effort while growing up. But most young women have not. They have not learned what they can expect of themselves. The major difference between the sexes may be their perception of their capacity for physical work."

The differences in the ways that women and men perceive exertion and physical effort was the subject of another Army test conducted at Wellesley College. Data was gathered by Dr. Vaughan in collaboration with Dr. Donald Horstman, of the Exercise Physiology Division of the Army Research Institute of Environmental Medicine in Natick, Mass.

Instead of women soldiers, women students at the college participated in a nine-week test program including running on treadmills and jogging around the campus.

This project was designed to discover whether a rugged training program would change women's perception of physical effort and therefore their ability to perform.

In order to discover how the women perceived their own abilities, scientific instruments measured actual physical effort. At the same time the women expressed their feelings at various stages of those efforts. As the young women ran, they checked off charts or pushed buttons to show when they found the going "easy", "more difficult", "beginning to be a strain", "hard", and "very, very hard".

This provided a basis for comparing women's feelings with men's in response to the same actual physical efforts.

Still another comparison is being made between how the women perceived their physical efforts before and after undergoing the training period. The nine-week course increased their actual respiratory endurance an average of eight per cent. Final results should show whether the women can assess their own physical capabilities and whether more accurate assessment will affect total performance.

"I never realized I could do this" may be just the first step in being able to do more.

At present, women fill all but 35 of the Army's combat-related jobs and work alongside men in tactical or combat support units. They now serve in formerly male-dominated jobs such as truck drivers, aircraft mechanics, heavy equipment operators and telephone linemen.

According to Bruce Andrae of Fort Jackson's public affairs office, "The idea behind these tests and this training is to prepare both women and men to play an equal part in the defense of a unit".

But, in a broader sense, the Army intensive research and testing programs may change forever women's ideas of their own strength.

Take off paint with turpentine

By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — My husband got some tar on the cotton material of his car seat and I would like to know what will remove this tar. Also what will take paint off of one's hands? — E.J.B.

DEAR E.J.B. — I have always used turpentine to remove paint from my hands and then follow with a good washing with soap and water and then lots of hand lotion.

Perhaps the following letter from a reader will help to solve your tar problem. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — and Mrs. E.W.S. — Many thanks for the information about kerosene removing tar from most anything. I certainly do appreciate your interest and find the column the greatest as it answers so many problems. — ROSE.

Thanks, Rose. — POLLY.

Today in U.S. history

By the Associated Press

Today is Sunday, April 24, the 114th day of 1977. There are 251 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date:

In 1704, the first American newspaper printed on a regular basis, the "Boston News Letter," was published for the first time.

In 1800, Congress appropriated $5,000 to create the Library of Congress.

In 1916, the Easter Rebellion broke out in Dublin, Ireland.

In 1964, Cuba asked the United Nations to take action to halt U.S. reconnaissance flights over the island.

Ten years ago: A Soviet cosmonaut, Vladimir Komarov, was killed when the parachute straps of his spacecraft became tangled and he plunged four miles to the earth.

Five years ago: In the Vietnamese War, Saigon's forces were retreating in the Central Highlands as Communist troops led by tanks launched a major offensive.

Today's birthday: Barbra Streisand is 35.

Thought for today: A feeble body weakens the mind. — Jean-Jacques Rousseau, French philosopher and writer, 1712-1778.

MAC DAVIS TO HEADLINE SPECIAL ON NBC TV NETWORK IN APRIL WITH GUESTS GOERGE CARLIN, DOLLY PARTON AND DONNA SUMMER

Composer- singer- recording star Mac Davis will headline "Mac Davis... Sounds Like Home" (tentative title), a special on which he will be joined by George Carlin, Dolly Parton and Donna Summer, Tuesday, April 26 (9-10 p.m. CST), on the NBC Television Network.

The program is keyed to roots and branches, dealing with the beginnings, influences and early experiences of Davis and his guest stars.

Gary Smith and Dwight Hemion will be producers; Hemion will direct. The writers are Buz Kohan and Rod Warren. Raymond Katz and Sandy Gallin are executive producers for Cauchemar Productions, Inc.

Davis has just released a new album, "Thunder in the Afternoon," and has been on tour performing before capacity audiences.

He received Awards of Excellence from the Film Advisory Board for his NBC-TV Christmas specials colorcast in 1975 and 1976, and was named Artist of the Year in 1975 by the Country Music Association.

Free Johnson & Johnson First Aid Kit

When you send for information about the Americare® Hospitalization Compensation Policy, you will receive this American Republic First Aid Kit by Johnson & Johnson. This modern kit contains Dermicel adhesive bandages, Tylenol for fast, safe pain relief, antiseptic towelettes, Band-Aid adhesive bandages, and a comprehensive first aid instruction folder.

M

It is yours without charge or obligation, of course. Mail the postage paid card for yours right now.

American Republic will provide benefits in the amount of $60 a day beginning the first day you are hospitalized for covered sickness or injury...

Since the average stay in the hospital is about seven days,* it is important that you buy a hospital policy that starts paying the first day you are hospitalized for covered sickness or injury. The Americare® Hospitalization Compensation Policy is basic first day coverage which can be valuable to any other supplemental policy you might own that only offers protection after the third, fifth or even after the seventh day of hospital confinement.

Yours for a lifetime.

You will be covered as long as you live and continue to pay your current premium on time. Your policy cannot be cancelled nor will we fail to renew it because of health reasons, regardless of the number of claims.

Why you may need Americare in addition to other hospitalization insurance you may have.

According to the American Hospital Association the average cost per patient day in the hospital reached $151.20 in 1976. In fact, this cost has increased over 300% in ten short years.

You probably have group insurance or a policy purchased from your agent. Keep it. You need it.

A hospital stay of only a few days can deplete your savings and leave you in debt. Your Americare protection can help you meet your hospital-stay related expenses and supplement the coverage of your present insurance. Perhaps the knowledge that you do have freedom from a degree of worry about money problems could even help speed recovery.

Benefits are paid direct to you, or if you wish they will be sent to your doctor or hospital.

This policy (Form A1881) provides benefits in addition to any other insurance you may have. It even pays benefits in addition to Workmen's Compensation and Medicare.

Send in the card below for a FREE gift and complete information about Americare, the policy that provides protection for the short or the long term hospital stay, even up to 365 days.

EXCEPTIONS:

This policy does not cover any sickness that first manifests itself less than 30 days from the date of issue; accidents occurring prior to the date of issue; or hospital care due to war, mental disorder, maternity, dental work, or in a U.S. Government or Veterans Hospital (except in Colorado, Missouri or Minnesota); nor convalescent homes, rest homes, nursing homes, or hospitals for the aged, drug addicts or alcoholics (except in Minnesota).

Act Now!
Don't gamble with your future.

According to the latest published figures, one person in seven will go to the hospital this year. Right now, while it is fresh in your mind — please fill in the postage-paid reply card below and mail it today. You will receive the FREE gift shown and complete information on how you can apply for this Americare Hospitalization Compensation Policy.

Delta Dusk

Kaleidoscope

Ever since the elections last fall, when one of our officials who has aspirations of mederocity mentioned that he had been urged by people from All Walks of Life to seek a higher office, I've been looking for the town. Since I do this magazine every week, it uses up a lot of material, and I'm always after a story that's new and different.

All Walks of Life should be new and different. I mean you are always hearing about it, but have you ever visited it? Have you ever seen a picture of anyone who is from All Walks of Life?

I thought not.

So, in the interest of enlightenment of the masses, and with all the skill of the investigative journalist, (Andros is my new hero) I started out in search of the town of All Walks of Life. I would get a scoop. I would be the first newsman to actually walk down the main street of All Walks of Life, and talk to the people about anything and everything.

I had many questions to ask the people of All Walks of Life. What is your evaluation of President Carter? What do you think about the new energy proposals? Are you satisfied now with the local officials you elected? Did you really send a letter to Farrah Fawcett-Majors, asking her to wear a bra?

I decided to find the town of All Walks of Life in the most scientific and logical method available to man. I asked someone at a gas station.

"Hey, do you get people from All Walks of Life here?" I asked, as the man pumped gas into my car. He was an ideal person to ask, he was a small, older man, with sparse white hair, weathered skin and a wizened aire about him.

The man looked up when I asked the question, then squired a stream of tobacco juice out, stopping a curious bug right in his tracks. The bug was curious about the words, "Country Squire" on the side of my car, and the curious bug and the wad of spent tobacco juice trickled down the side.

"Yep, I get people from all walks of life through here," he answered.

"Where is that?" I asked.

"Where is what?"

"All Walks of Life?"

"Right here. They come through here."

"People from All Walks of Life?"

"Yep."

"Where do they come from?"

"They come from all walks of life," the man answered, now getting a little confused.

"Could you tell me how to get to All Walks of Life?" I asked, pleasantly.

The man balanced out the tobacco stain on my car, with another one. He pulled the hose out and looked at me. "That'll be ten dollars and thirty cents for the gas," he said.

As I drove away from the service station I heard an ad on the radio:

"People from all walks of life are flocking to Furniture World for their second annual closing out sale. So come on down to Furniture World, right now, for the best bargain around."

I had a fantastic idea. I would flock to Furniture World, and wait for someone from All Walks of Life to show up, then follow them home.

I saw a station wagon drive up to Furniture World. A skinny man, a fat woman and two kids got out. One of the kids stuck his lollypop in the other kid's hair.

"Are you all from All Walks of Life?" I asked.

"Uh, no, we don't live around here," the man answered hesitantly.

"Come along, Homer," the woman said.

"I'm just looking for All Walks of Life," I said. "I thought maybe you were from there. I mean I saw you flocking to Furniture World, like the radio said."

"Come along Homer."

"I'm sorry I can't help you," Homer said, apologetically. "But I'm not from here."

My quest was leading me into trails of frustration. Everyone, it seemed, had heard of All Walks of Life, but no one seemed to know where it was. And, although people from All Walks of Life were flocking everywhere, and were writing, calling, or stopping politicians on the street. I was completely unable to find one person from that famous city.

I have my own theories about it now. I think, from all that I can piece together, that All Walks of Life, was once a thriving city-state, on an island in the Mississippi. They had a very advanced culture, and a highly developed technology. They were in a sort of loose confederacy with Atlantis, and had exchanged ambassadors with the mysterious place.

Then, catastrophe struck. All Walks of Life was invaded one year by alligator gar. The alligator gar went on an eating rampage, consuming everything on the island, all the buildings, technological wonders, and historical records. Not a trace of that civilization was left on the island.

But, many of them escaped, using innertubes from the tires of 1936 Terraplanes to float away. Now these people are assimilated into our own society. They look just like us, in fact, they may be your next door neighbor. I'm not sure that there's anything sinister about all this, but I am a little concerned that our politicians pay so much attention to what people from All Walks of Life think, and so little attention to what is good for their constituents.

I think we ought to look into it, but I don't have time. I just saw a pickup truck go by with a shotgun on the window rack. The driver was wearing a cowboy hat, and sucking on a toothpick. He had a pack of cigarettes rolled up in the sleeve of a T-shirt that said, "Keep on Truckin'". Someone said that he was a good ole' boy, and I just want to find out for myself.

Duel at Cypress Island

Story by Robert Vaughan

In the early 1800s, right after what is now Missouri became a part of the United States, gambling was the most prevalent pastime. It provides a common meeting ground for the older French residents and the newer immigrants. Sometimes the games would last for as long as 30 hours, and lawyers, medical men, merchants and officers of civil and military authority, even Indian traders, played cards for amusement.

There was an undertone of violence to the amusement of cards however, because the gamblers bet very heavily. Since they bet heavily, tempers often flared, and most carried some sort of weapon for their protection.

It was a very common thing; and one visitor to the Southeast Missouri district wrote that he was greatly surprised when he saw daggers fall out of the "bosom while the owner was dancing with a lady", and "the ladies did not betray any uneasiness at the sudden and unexpected exposures of such murderous weapons."

Because of the proliferation of weapons, it sometimes seemed that the shortest road to settle a dispute was to fight a duel. One of the first duels after the cession of Louisiana occured in Cape Girardeau in 1807 between Joseph McFerron and William Ogle. McFerron was the first clerk of the courts of the Cape Girardeau district. He was an Irishman, with superior education, long, bushy eyebrows, and genial and pleasant in his personality. He had settled in Cape Girardeau before the cession and taught school in the American settlement near the post established by Lieutenant Girardeau.

William Ogle was a merchant of Cape Girardeau at the time, a native of Maryland who had settled in the town in the previous year. He was a gruff person with a mean disposition, and though the exact cause of the difference of opinion between Ogle and McFerron is unknown, it is known that there was "bad blood" between them.

It came to a head one afternoon when Ogle insulted McFerron, then slapped him in the face and challenged him to a duel. McFerron had never fired a pistol in his life, but he promptly accepted the challenge.

At dawn on the appointed day McFerron and a small group of his friends waited in the cold, morning fog on a sandbar known then as Cypress Island.

"Joe, its a foolish man you are," Charles O'Hara, another Irishman and friend of McFerron's said. "Ogle is a crack shot and the story is he killed a man in Maryland before comin' out here. Call it off, no one will think the less of you."

"I can't be doin that," McFerron answered. "I'll not be livin' my life in shame here in my own home."

Somewhere a bird called and a fish jumped. McFerron shivered, and pulled his coat around him.

The slap of oars pulling against water drifted across the river, and though they couldn't see anything, they knew that a boat was approaching the island.

"Here they come," someone said, though his statement was totally unnecessary.

The small group looked toward the fog bank until the boat came into view. It appeared as a black shadow, and someone later remarked that it made them think of a crew of ghosts, crossing the River Styx.

The boat landed with a small scraping sound and Ogle stepped out. He looked at McFerron and smiled. "Well, McFerron, are you prepared to die, or will you let it be known the craven coward that you are?"

"There's no more time for talk," McFerron replied. "Let's do this evil thing and be done."

Ogle laughed. "Oh, come to take your medicine, have you? Then, let it be."

Their seconds lined the men up, then started to step back.

"Mr. McFerron, your pistol is not cocked," Ogle's second said.

"Excuse me," McFerron said, drawing back the hammer. "I'm ready now, sir."

The seconds began counting off the paces, each man took 10, then they turned and fired. The ball from McFerron's pistol struck Ogle right between the eyes, and he fell dead with a bullet lodged in his brain. Ogle had fired at the same time, but his ball whizzed by McFerrons head, doing no damage.

There was a shocked silence for a few moments, then McFerron hurled his pistol into the river. "This is a cursed way for man to be," he yelled, then sunk to his knees to pray for forgiveness.

McFerron resigned his position as clerk of court, but at the insistence of the citizens of Cape Girardeau, he was reinstated and served in that position until his death many years later. The old records of Cape County, still bear his handwriting, meticulously clear, without one erasure or correction.

Instant Chaos

Story by Aline Vaughan

Take a young lady raised in the city, set her down on a farm with no electricity, no indoor plumbing, no gas or phone, and believe me you have instant chaos.

Little did I dream as I said "I do" that day in Jackson, Miss. that one year later I would be on a farm in Missouri, wishing I had said "NO WAY."

My mother and father-in-law had written to us and suggested that we move to Mo. and try farming. They felt we could do better financially on the farm that we were doing in the city. Of course, that was before they knew how out of place I would be as a farmer's wife.

I think they began to suspect though, the very day we arrived on their farm. We were standing in the back yard talking and suddenly the biggest and ugliest hog I ever saw came walking into the yard. I let out a shrill scream and ran for the house. The hog let out a shrill scream, (it sounded like a scream to me) and I thought he was running right behind me. The whole family assured me that he did not chase me, and that the only reason he squealed was because I had scared him as much as he had scared me. I doubt that very much.

Later we moved into our own place, and some new crisis seemed to crop up every day or so. One day my jusband came in expecting to find dinner waiting. "I pumped and pumped that dumb pump, but it just doesn't have anymore water in it." I complained. He took a cup of water out and poured it into the top, and pumped a couple of times, and out came a big stream of water. "It just needed a little priming, that's all." I thought he sounded smug. "Nobody ever told me you had to do that." I said defensively.

The next crisis was of a more serious nature. My mother-in-law had given us a rooster and some hens. I thought it was great fun to go out and bring in fresh eggs right out of the nest. One day a hen was occupying one of the nests. I thought she was laying an egg, so I didn't disturb her. The next day she was still on the same nest, so I told my husband about it. He said "She's setting. We'll put some eggs in her nest, and she'll hatch out some baby chicks." I was so excited. Our very own baby chicks!

He took a pencil and marked all over the eggs. "Why did you do that?" I asked. "Well, if another hen lays some eggs in her nest, we'll want to know which ones are the fresh ones." Well, if another hen was inconsiderate enough to lay hens in her nest, then I guess you would need to know which ones they were. I was amazed at how smart he was.

Next day as I gathered the eggs, I went very quietly around her. I just didn't feel right intruding on her privacy when she was setting. When my husband came in, I told him I didn't look for any eggs in her nest. "But you have to Honey. You can't leave any fresh eggs in that nest." He started out to the hen-house. I went with him. "Just do it like this." he said as he picked up the hen and set her on another nest. Sure enough, there was an egg that didn't belong. It looked easy enough.

The next morning my husband left early to go to Ill. for a load of coal. Iwent about my chores in the house, then went to get the eggs. I got all the ones off the other nests, then I picked up the setting hen and put her on another nest. Suddenly she growled at me and ruffled her feathers until she looked gigantic. I knew she was going to attack me, so I grabbed a cardboard box and threw it over her head. I ran as fast as I could towards the house, and that vicious chicken was right behind me. I barely made it to the door ahead of her. I could hardly breathe I was so scared. That's one more thing nobody bother to tell me, I thought angrily. Nobody ever bothered to tell me how mean and vicious a chicken is if it doesn't like you. That one obviously didn't like me. NOBODY had to tell me that!

I watched her from the safety of my house to see what she was going to do next. Unlike Lisa, from the T. V. show GREEN MEADOWS, I don't understand chicken talk. I did know however, that as that old hen walked back and forth in front of my door, she wasn't saying nice things about me.

Eventually, she strayed out as far as the barn, and I decided to very quietly sneak out and bring in the eggs I had run off and left. I got about halfway out to the hen-house, and that darned hen saw me. I ran like mad and just made it in the hen-house and slammed the door before she got to me. Whew! That was close. My relief was shortlived tho, as I realized that she had me trapped in there, and there was no one to let me out. I looked out through a knot-hole. She was pacing up and down outside the door, making all kinds of clucking and growling noises. This went on ALL DAY LONG! I wondered if she was going to make me stay in there until my husband came home from the coal mines. I really began to panic. I might be in there until it got dark! I felt like I would smother.

Late that evening as I continued to watch her through the knot-hole, she went out to the barn again. This time I didn't try to sneak anyplace. I just threw that door open and I ran like the devel himself was chasing me. I don't think I would have been more frightened if it had been. I was almost to the house before she knew I was gone. She came after me half running and half flying. I beat her to the house, thank goodness. I don't have to tell you, I did not bring in any more eggs.

As I look back now, that whole year was one nightmare. My husband came in one evening and said he and his brother were going gigging. "What do you do when you go gigging?" I asked. "You put meat on the table woman." he answered, as he kissed me good-by.

Oh well, I guess that is just some more of that confusing Missouri slang for going hunting, I thought. I wondered what kind of animal you hunted at night.

I awakened some time during the night, and heard the two of them laughing and talking in the kitchen. "Boy!" Look at that rascal! He sure is a big one. Come in here Hon, you've just got to see these things." I threw a robe on and quickly ran to the kitchen dazed with sleep. I promise you that what I saw woke me fast enough! My husband and his brother each held one of the most frightening looking creatures I had ever laid my eyes on. I didn't even know what they were. It was like a nightmare. I was too terrified to even scream. I literally flew back into the bedroom and jumped right into the middle of the bed and pulled the covers as tightly around me, as I could. I shook so badly I wonder that I was able to stay on the bed. "For goodness sake Honey, they're not going to hurt you." Oh yeah, that's what he said about the hen too. I was taking no chances. I kept the covers tightly over my head and didn't say a word. I couldn't do anything but shake. "They're just bull frogs." He said it like maybe I'd seen one before. It was no wonder they looked so scary. I had heard one once, and the sound had sent chills up my spine. I thought it was some kind of wild animal that I'd never heard before. He had said it then too. "They re nothing but bullfrogs."

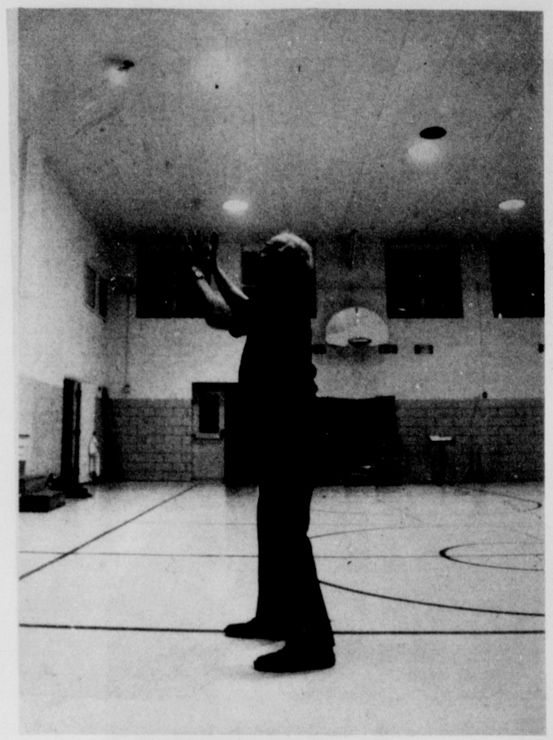

The next day, I said, "We are either moving to Sikeston, and getting out of this wild place, or I'm going back to Jackson." Right at that moment, I was so overwrought, I meant it too. He promised to move into Sikeston as soon as the crop was all in. We did too.

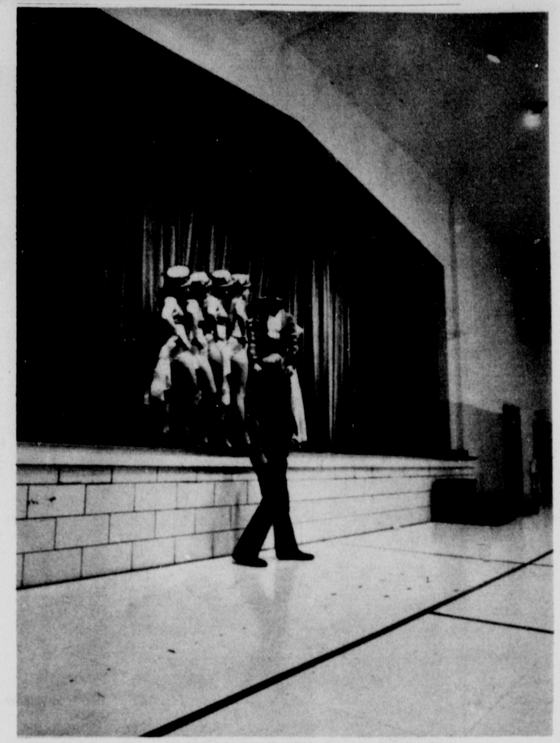

It's no wonder the pioneer women died young. Their demise was hastened I'm sure from being frightened by worms, snakes, chickens and idiotic husbands showing them bullfrogs in the middle of the night.

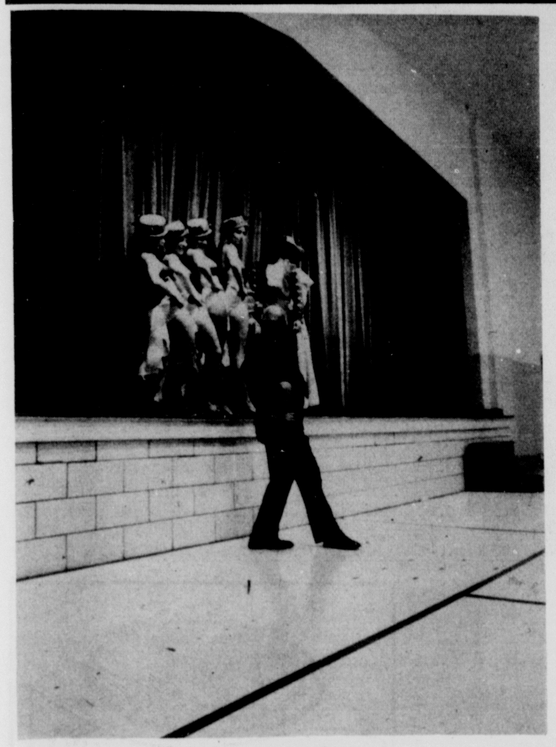

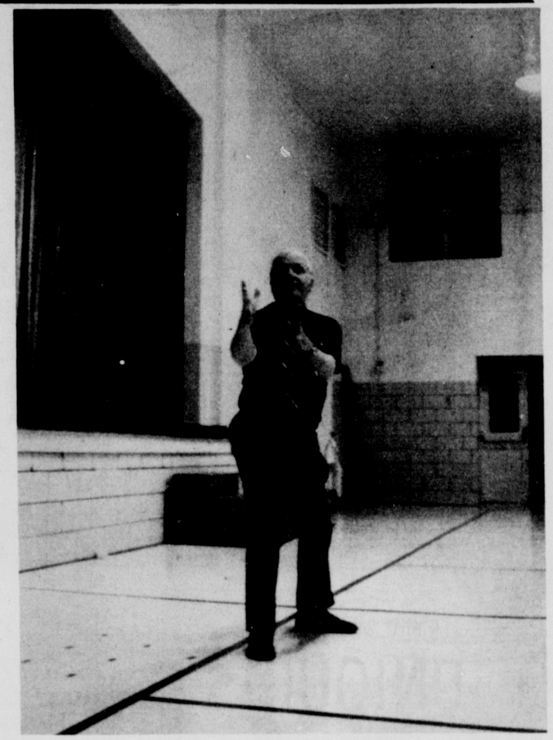

Jollies At The Follies

By Robert Vaughan

Tom Chatham makes it his business to turn housewives, secretaries, lawyers and businessmen into polished performers. Working with Cargil out of New York, he takes the show, ALL THAT JAZZ on the road. His enthusiasm for the project in infectuous. His skill, dedication and professionalism is more than equal to the seemingly impossible task.

IF WHAT YOU SEEK IS UNIQUE

When Flo Ziegfield wanted to create a spectacular, extravaganza, gala show, he called it the follies. Since that time the word follies has been synonomous with beautiful women, striking dances, sparkling songs, and snappy comedy.

Pat Hawkins and Pam Bedell have the task of spreading the word for this, the fourth annual Red Stocking Follies.

"We were supposed to be assistants," Pat said. "But the principal moved, and the next thing you know we were doing it."

"How do you like doing it?" I asked.

"I love it," she answered. "It's really a great deal of fun, and you know, there's an excitement to seeing so many people working together to pull this thing off."

"And of course it's all for a good cause," Pam put in. "The proceeds from the show this year go to the Pediatrics Ward of the hospital."

"Neither of you are from Sikeston originally, are you?" I asked.

"I'm from St. Louis," Pat said.

"And I'm from Poplar Bluff," Pam put in.

"But, I'm happy to sday, you've both got a Sikeston community spirit," I replied. "But what about the Red Stocking Follies? What do you see in its future?"

"I thnk it's a tremendous thing for the commnity," Pat said. "I know it is a lot of fun. I think it will be around for a while."

"Do you see it becoming as muh an annual event as say, the Jaycee Rodeo?"

"I don't know," Pat said. "You know, we are always being compared with the Jaycees. But it isn't a fair comparison. They meet once a week, all year long. We meet once a month, and not all year."

"But at that, you don't come off a poor second," I suggested. "I personally see the Red Stocking Follies becoming an area draw, just like the Rodeo here, and the ARt Festival in Charleston. I think it is a cultural plus for the entire bootheel area, and I'm glad to see you do it. Now, when is the show?"

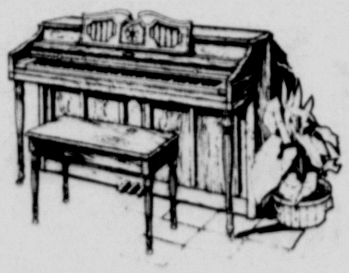

"April 29th and 30th," Pam said. "Will you be there?"

With red stockings on," I promised.

Music Builds Confidence. Most educators agree that accomplishment is the key to confidence. Learning to play the piano is the kind of personal accomplishment they have in mind. So another good reason to point your children to music is its confidence-building qualities.

Prince Valiant

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: THE CROSSING TO EGYPT WAS ROUGH BUT GUNTHER WORE FULL ARMOR AT ALL TIMES.

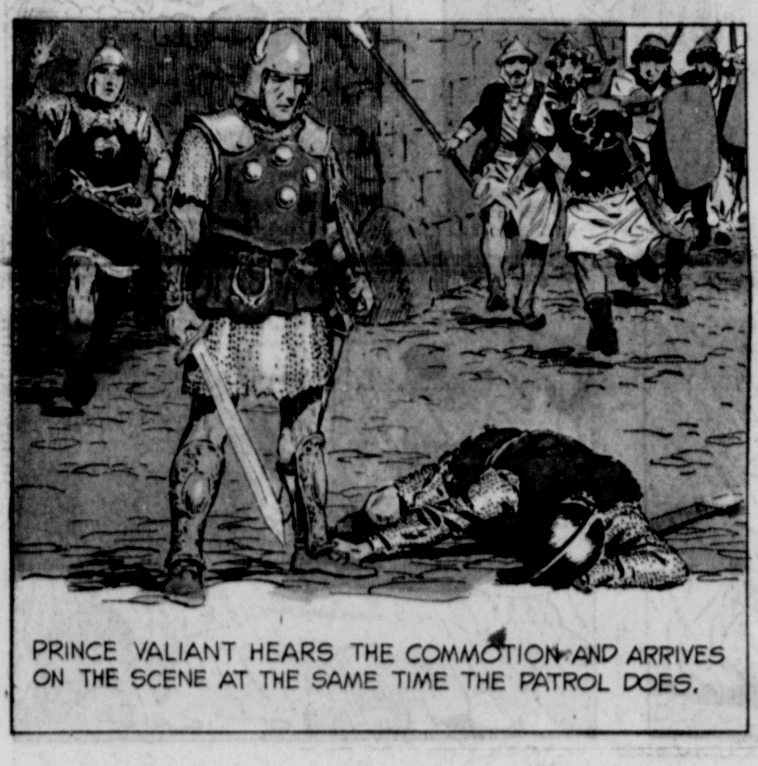

AS THE SHIP MOORS AT THE QUAY, HE HURRIES ASHORE TO BEGIN THE SEARCH FOR HIS ENEMIES.

HE RECOGNIZES ONE OF THE CONSPIRATORS WHO HAD CAUSED THE DEATH OF HIS FATHER AND TWO BROTHERS. ONE TERRIBLE BLOW SETTLES THAT SCORE.

THE OFFICER IS A REASONABLE MAN. VAL HAS A FULL PURSE. "JUST SOME FOREIGNERS HAVING A QUARREL," HE SAYS, JINGLING THE PURSE.

"YOU ARE PERFECTLY RIGHT, SIR. I WILL HAVE THE STREET CLEANERS HERE IN A FEW MINUTES."

"INSTEAD OF FIGHTING, YOU SHOULD HAVE FOLLOWED HIM. HE MIGHT HAVE LED YOU TO THE RELICS."
"I DO THINGS MY OWN WAY, THANK YOU," ANSWERS GUNTHER.

HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

We were having out-of-town guests and I needed a place for them to put their suitcases.

I bought two inexpensive folding campstools, painted the legs a dark burnt umber, bought some fake fur and covered the seat part.

They look so neat that I just leave them in the room as they don't detract from the decor of the room.

Mrs. E.D. Kitchens

I'm sure your guests appreciated your thoughtfulness. No bending or stooping to hunt in suitcases for necessary items. Easy to pack and unpack. You're a living angel.

JUST FOR MOTHER

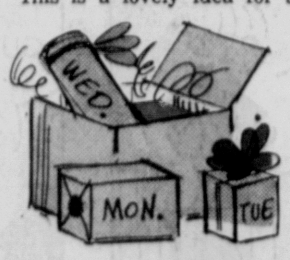

DEAR HELOISE:

I always read your articles with interest and would like to share what I did when my mother was living.

For Mother's Day, her birthday, or any special occasion, I would send a package so it reached her a week early, and in the package would be a little gift to be opened each day.

Each little gift would be marked "Sunday," "Monday," etc. with the nicest gift for the actual "special day" — birthday, Easter, etc. I would call it a "special" week.

This is a lovely idea for a

Thanks for your delightful, useful and original ideas.

Mrs. M.J. Easterwood

Thanks, doll, for sharing this beautiful idea with us.

ON THE BEACH

DEAR HELOISE:

When you collect beach pebbles and sea shells, coat

them with layers of clear nail polish or clear shellac to keep that wet look and rich color that attracted you to them in the first place.

Janella Pak

OH, FUDGE!

DEAR HELOISE:

When making fudge I puzzled over how to cut the wax paper to fit the pan. So I turned the pan over, laid the paper over the bottom, slid the serrated edge of a knife around the edge.

This perforated the shape of the pan so that it was simple to tear the paper for an exact fit.

Carol

COMPLETE A-CORD

DEAR HELOISE:

The metal shower curtain hooks or rings have proven very useful in my home.

These can be used to hang up extension cords (especially heavy-duty cords) by putting the ring over or around the looped cord and closing the ring.

THREE-PART SERIAL

DEAR HELOISE:

Leftover cooked cereal can be cooled, sliced and fried.

Or used in a custard dish and baked, or in bread pudding and baked.

IN A PICKLE?

DEAR HELOISE:

I save all my sweet pickle juice. When someone comes for a visit and I serve a salad, I just put the pickle juice on the salad in place of mayonnaise.

It really peps up that salad. Taste it and see.

MY LITTLE MOUSE

DEAR HELOISE:

I am 12 years old and have a good way to save money.

I have a mouse and his food dish has hooks to hang on the cage. Whenever I feed him, he knocks the dish down and spills the food.

I looked around my room to find something to hold the dish in place. I found a hairpin and slipped it through the hooks on the outside of the cage.

It works perfectly.

CUTTING REMARKS

DEAR HELOISE:

If your electric can opener doesn't do the neat job it once did, skips around the can top and leaves it still connected in spots, go to your nearest service center and order a new cutting wheel.

They are very inexpensive and are very simple to replace.

Mrs. D.

NO SLIP UPS!

DEAR HELOISE:

My mom had some half slips that she didn't need any more so she gave them to my sister and me.

They come between our ankles and our knees and they are just right to use as a slip under a long dress.

If they are too big in the waist, it is very easy to make them smaller by making the elastic smaller.

TABLE THIS ONE!

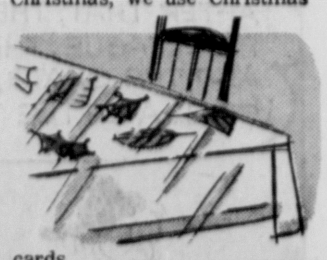

DEAR HELOISE:

My mother thought of a good idea and I would like to pass it on to you and your readers.

On our dining table, Mom put on a tablecloth and on it she put colorful leaves and over that she put a clear plastic tablecloth!

It was really pretty and she got a lot of compliments on it.

On different holidays we use different things such as on Christmas, we use Christmas cards.

At a nearby store that sells decorations you can buy decorations for St. Patrick's Day, Valentine's Day, Easter and birthdays or you can make your own decorations.

● Name Game! Add four short masculine names to complete these names of edibles: 1. ____ ato. 2. ____ ichoke. 3. Aspara ____ . 4. ____ tils.

1. Tom. 2. Art. 3. Gus. 4. Len.

● Free Throw! Which point is likeliest to be thrown when rolling two dice? P.S.: Odds against it are 5 to 1. Next best odds are 8 to 1.

Seven. Five and nine are eight to one.

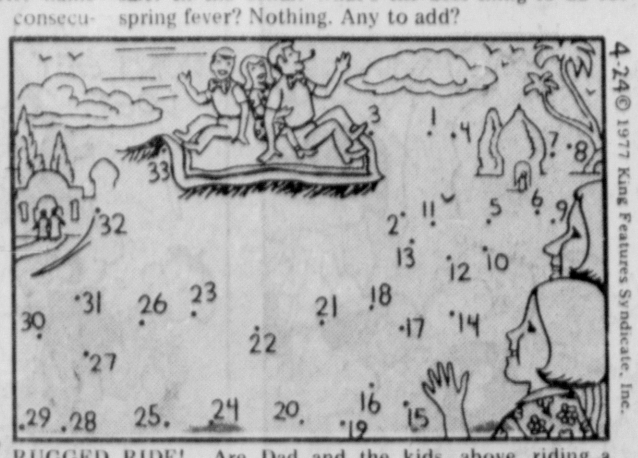

● What's Best? Where's the best place to look for salt? In the cellar. What's the best thing to do for spring fever? Nothing. Any to add?

WORDY BIRD! A birdwatcher, who's also a puzzlist, came up with the poser above. Object is to insert the six-letter name of a certain bird in consecutively numbered outer circles so that each three letters from outside in (ending in e) forms a common three-letter word. Now, it so happens that a lot of birds have six-letter names, such as the thrush, pigeon, phoebe, grouse, oriole, cuckoo, magpie, shrike.

Which bird meets the requirement?
